THE CASE of HUMANITY vs. the FLY

The House Fly as the Eye of the Microscope sees him his summer's battle with the pest to be the fiercest ever fought

IF, THROUGHOUT long years, there had lived in your household a family of servants that bred under your shelter and fed upon your food, and if you, after your parents and your parents' parents had taught you that those servants protected you and yours from secret, invisible foes, had discovered that the whole tribe of them were in reality the allies of your enemies and lived by constantly poisoning you and those you hold best and dearest, what would you do?

That is precisely the case of you and yours against Musca domestica, the common house fly.

All over the United States today, at the beginning of this summer, there are thousands of men and women who, having studied the overwhelming evidence against the insect traitors, have taken up the weapons amply provided by human science and knowledge to engage the house fly in deadly encounter. But all over the United States there are millions who must decide now, at this hour, whether they are to enlist for the war or sit, luxuriously idle, looking on from the amphitheater.

The refined, elegant, poisonously lazy old Romans did that, while barbarian gladiators, with net and deadly trident, sought to slay each other in the bloody arena, and the time came when the barbarians slaughtered the elegant and refined Romans.

In the year that begins in earnest now every human being who is not the mortal and implacable enemy of the common house fly is his active and energetic ally, and so the mortal and implacable foe of humanity. In this new war, with so many thousands already enlisted for the fray, the question is, for the millions still outside of the arena, Humanity's friends or humanity's foes—which?

OH, THIS is the most saffron of yellow journalism, with all its feverish blotches—deadly encounters, secret foes, traitor—bloody wars! The thing is so hyperbolic that it is funny.

Then for the sake of that humanity which has already been too long suffering in the matter of hyperbole and the saffron hue of its literature, let us meet on the chill plane of logic and agree.

That any proposition which is literally true can be neither hyperbole, exaggeration, sensationalism nor funny, and, also,

When the proposition involves human deaths on the scale of massacres it is not only grim, but tragic, and, third,

The burden of proof lies upon the proponents.

Those proponents—who happen to be the national government at Washington, the boards of health and leading sanitarians of the United States and such advanced members of the laity as the powerful Merchants' Association of New York city—have gone all through the mass of evidence against the common house fly.

They have adjudged him guilty of the deaths of human thousands, from the time the Mayflower pilgrims landed on the continent, and now they have pledged themselves to a hand-to-hand struggle that shall not cease until the house fly is exterminated.

There is not one among those active champions of the cause of humanity against the fly who is so dead to humor as to fail to see the comic side of big words as applied to a campaign against so insignificant and, apparently, so helpless an insect. Dean Swift had poorer material for satire when he cast away Gulliver among the Lilliputians.

But mere numbers suffice to make a radical change in any odds of conflict, the scale can at last become so vast that only huge phrases can be proportionate.

WHOLE NATION AFFECTED

The human family, in the United States, breeds from two to four of its kind per pair in the course of a lifetime, and the generations require twenty years to achieve a maturity practically productive.

It has taken more than 200 years for the race here, aided by constant accessions from the rest of the world, to attain to 80,000,000.

Any one of those 80,000,000 can crush a house fly, if he can catch him, as readily as John L. Sullivan could have crushed Charley Mitchell if he could have caught him.

The annihilating process would be simple if Musca domestica were no more reproductive than humanity, or if humanity had nothing else to do than slay Musca domestica. But the spectacle of 80,000,000 people chasing flies would be only a degree more grotesque than was that famous spectacle of Sullivan chasing Mitchell.

With those two alternatives eliminated the problem of the house fly, once its pernicious activities were demonstrated, became one as great as that of the yellow-fever mosquito of Cuba and Panama. For, in the first ray of intelligent investigation, glimpsed wholesale tragedy, as tragedy had already been glimpsed in the pellucid pools of wayside brooks which a whole countryside poisons with typhoid.

This common fly, only one of whose species, by a single, fatal footprint, can kill a man, lays 120 eggs, which hatch within eight hours. The larva period lasts five days and the pupa period five days—in all, 10 days for the new generation to leap into full, active life.

Males and females are about evenly divided. In a single summer, in the latitude of Washington, D. C.—not a bad average for the country at large—one pair of flies will produce twelve generations.

The total number of their descendants is then 14,067,791,000,000,000 flies.

Admit that the whole 80,000,000 of us devote the whole summer to the killing of the whole family of a single pair of flies, and every man, woman and child in the United States must kill 175,847,400 of the pests to wipe out that one fly family.

Now multiply the descendants of that one pair of flies by the original first families of the summer, in number so trivial, in comparison with their actual horde, as merely one million—which does not represent the first fly families of a single second-class city—and we have a total of 14,067,792,000,000,000,000 flies that we are called upon to exterminate, or 175,847,400,000,000 to be slain within three months by every impossible fly-chaser among us, including the new-born babes.

Divided up, it means that the hand that smites the fly would have to move at the rate of 22,614,120 times per second, and never miss a fly.

Remembering always that, even allowing for the destruction in their ranks wrought by natural causes—bird, reptile and insect foe—and their own short span of life—the calculation is still limited not by the figures reduced, but by the amount of food or which the flies can fatten; and it is pertinent to observe that every fly possesses 12,000 foot hairs.

INFINITY AWES IMAGINATION

These hairs exude a slimy fluid peculiarly adapted to the accumulation of bacteria. Upon those foot hairs dwelling-house flies have been found to average 880,000 poisonous germs per insect—or to be mildly precise about it—12,379,656,080,000,000,000,000,000 germs are carried to man's nose within the few summer months.

Again we confront absurdity, but of a very different kind, for it is the absurdity of infinity, before which the imagination shrinks in awe; and the smile whenever we can muster it, is decidedly sickly in its accompaniment of the question.

"It's funny they don't kill us."

The answer is: They do.

Thus far, and necessarily for the sake of the main figures required to bludgeon a coronation horn of the days when we believed the fly was a germ destroyer the many and illuminating side lights upon his Borgia career have been shut off lest they confuse the main, important fact that, by dint of sheer numbers, the house fly unchecked can overwhelm humanity. But now those other facts become of leading value. That old simple child-like faith in the perfect balance of nature as it applied to flies, was to the effect that whenever there were disease germs prevalent in unusual number, flies came in a corresponding measure, collected the germs on their bodies as they flew through the air, ate and destroyed them. It was a popular science of the brand that fails in certain vital particulars.

True, flies do collect bacteria, although not quite in the capacity of aerial precipitants; rather, far rather, as terrestrial scavengers, stable flies carrying 420,000 germs on their swill-barrel flies an average of 6,600,000 germs.

Wife of a Los Angeles Boniface Disappears With All Her Jewels Dread of War Sets All of Europe At Present in State of Great Unrest

J. W. HUNT IS IN SAD PLIGHT

She Left Him Sitting at Dinner and Piss Note to Pillow

"OFF FOR FREEDOM" WITH A HANDSOME RUSSIAN

Woman's Choice Has His Picture in Paris Rogues' Gallery For Other Affairs

(By VANCE THOMPSON)

PARIS, June 5.—J. W. Hunt, a man of 65 years, the owner of the Hotel Angeles of Los Angeles, who is a resident in New York and in Savannah, Ga., after divorcing his first wife, Mr. Hunt married Miss Henrietta Babcock, of Detroit, Mich., a beautiful girl 21 years of age. This was eight years ago. They traveled widely and had no fixed home. They crossed the ocean five times and lately bought a thirty-horsepower touring car in New York and had it shipped to Naples, where they passed the winter. A negro chauffeur brought them to Paris via the Chateau district and they took an apartment in the new Hotel Crillon in the Place de la Concorde.

Handsomeness Russian

There Mrs. Hunt met the fatal Russian, Alexander Tchernoduboff, of Moscow. He is 30 years old, handsome, a giant, with a blonde moustache and a military air. He was formerly secretary to M. Hartmann, of No. 60 Boulevard Haussmann, the agent of the Carnegie Trust Company. Afterwards he was vaguely in the automobile trade. The handsome Russian went everywhere with the Hunts, paying special attention to the pretty young wife. Their flirtation was noticed by everybody except the elderly husband.

Last Tuesday evening while at dinner, Mrs. Hunt complained of feeling ill, and went to her room leaving her husband at the table. When Mr. Hunt had finished dinner he tried to find his wife but "she was gone, leaving on the pillow a letter saying she was tired of him and wanted her freedom, nor need he look for her. The Russian was also gone. They were found at Chantilly after a two days search.

Gets Jewels Back

There was a stormy scene, but finally Mr. Hunt got back a glimpse containing $50,000 worth of jewels which his wife had fled with. Then he left her to her Russian and consulted Lawyer Frederic Allain about a divorce. Mr. Hunt is now returning on the Cunard accompanied by a friend of his wife, Miss Allen from Detroit, Mich. The lawyer, meanwhile, is suing the Russian, who has no money beyond a small income from his foster mother, while Mrs. Hunt has less than $500 in the world.

Norwood's Career

The Paris career of Carlisle S. Norwood, Jr., who has long been discussed by his New York family, has come to a deplorable end. He is now a fugitive from justice for the alleged robbery of $500,000 francs and the alleged robbery of $500,000 francs. Norwood, while he has been the ostensible business of an automobile agent, made more by borrowing from all classes of American visitors with whom he could strike on his father's good name. A few nights ago he left in with a wealthy visitor, said to be W. G. Gunn, and Norwood, formerly of Philadelphia, and whom he married in Los Angeles in June, 1907. The party made the rounds of all the night restaurants and wine rooms and the incautious guest displayed a well-stocked pocketbook. At one of the last places of call Norwood and the pocketbook disappeared.

Complains to Police

Mr. Gunn, who is stopping at a hotel in the Champs Elysee, did not complain until late in the day. A detective who was sent out on the case told the American correspondent that Norwood had reached his apartment and hastily packed his bags, telling the waiter that he had been summoned to London. A search of the apartment disclosed large quantities of clothes, dresses, furs and shoes secured from various tradesmen, whose complaints are now coming in. Norwood has left his wife and a baby two months old. Strenuous efforts were made both at the police headquarters and in the American resorts to keep secret the name of the man whose purse had disappeared. The police, who have Norwood's record, insisted on a prosecution. "Norwood" procured a passport from the American embassy through the recommendation of friends of the family. It is believed that he is on his way to South Africa, though tonight the police heard a rumor that he had been arrested in London.

BILLY BURKE HAS ADOPTED FRIEND'S DAUGHTER

Tragedy, Romance and Other Emotions Behind Her Failure

Receives Word on Stage of Her Dearest Friend's Death in Yonkers

PARIS, June 5.—Tragedy, romance and all sorts of emotions were behind the unexpected failure which Billy Burke made when she opened in London in "Love Watcher." No one in the audience knew what was the matter with the brilliant actress, who seemed under a cloud.

Only today Miss Burke confided to the American correspondent the real trouble that underlay the make believe comedy of the evening.

When Miss Burke sailed from New York she bade goodbye at the pier to her dearest friends, Mrs. Thomas Watson and her little ten-year-old daughter, Cheridell Watson. They were such intimate friends that Mrs. Watson occupied Billy Burke's home at Yonkers during the absence of the actress in Europe. Just before Miss Burke went on the stage to her London opening she received a telegram announcing the sudden death of Mrs. Watson in Yonkers.

Mrs. Watson had taken cold on the dock which rapidly developed into pneumonia. It was the thought of her dead friend and of little Cheridell alone in the house of mourning that caused Billy Burke's half hearted performance for the first night audience. She immediately called for Cheridell to come to her, accompanied by one of Miss Burke's maids, and the little orphan made the journey to Paris and found her new mother.

"Yes, I have adopted Cheridell," said Miss Burke. "She is my little girl now, just as tight as love can make her, but when we go back to New York late in August I shall have legal papers of adoption made out which will make her mine for good and all."

Meanwhile Cheridell, a quiet faced little girl in black, is learning French, taking long rides in an automobile and studying French history.

WEDS IN VEIL OF PRINCESS MATHILDE

PARIS, June 5.—The sun came out a few hours on Thursday to shine on the church wedding of Miss Josephine Morse, daughter of the late Consul General Samuel B. Morse, with Robert Lorenz, the son of a wealthy manufacturer of France, at Saint Pierre du Chateau.

The two met in Tokyo, where Miss Josephine was visiting the wife of Captain Dougherty, the United States naval attaché. They will make their home in the friends of the bride, including France.

The church was crowded with American Ambassador White, Consul General Mason and other members of the diplomatic corps.

"PETER PAN" IS PUZZLING

PARIS, June 5.—Charles Frohman and J. M. Barrie came to Paris for the opening night at the Vaudeville theater, where an English company has renewed the effort tried last year to compel Parisians to admire "Peter Pan."

NORDICA GIVES LAST CONCERT

LONDON, June 5.—Madame Nordica gives a farewell concert on June 17 and the king has honored the American artist by ordering the entire front row of seats reserved for himself and guests. Nordica still declines to give the date of her wedding.

MRS. CHAUNCEY HAS DENIED SHE IS TO MARRY

Grows Weary and Displeased Over This Latest Absurdity

She Starts New Style of Wearing Fruit on Her Hat

LONDON, June 5.—Mrs. Lucile Sloan Chauncey is very angry at the reports which appear in a New York paper, that she was engaged to some unnamed American and that she was at the point of leaving New York to clear her name.

Replying to an inquiry as to the truth of the report, Mrs. Chauncey sent the following message to the London bureau of the New York American:

"I am weary and displeased over these repeated reports of my engagement, but this particular report is the most absurd of all. Please state for me that it is absolutely untrue."

Mrs. Chauncey has of late been prominent in the fashion columns, because of a new mode of headgear which she has made popular at the opera. Four out of every six smart society women appear either with wordy replicas in diamonds or else bunches of wonderful imitation fruit, usually cherries or grapes, worn in a careless fashion on the side of the head. It was Mrs. Chauncey who started the grape fashion. At a party given to meet Princess Alexandra of Hesse, the other night, Mrs. Chauncey appeared in a Russian gown of geranium red with very few jewels and an immense bunch of black grapes in her coiffure so arranged that one or two grapes dangled on her neck. The Duchess of Rutland, Lady Wickham, Lady Linton and Lady Maudslayi, American women, decline that the smartest and best dressed Englishwoman in London society this season is Lady Evelyn Clavering.

Old Paris Crowded Out By American Skyscrapers

TOWERING BUILDINGS DESTROY THE OLD HISTORIC SKYLINES

(By MARQUIS DE CASTELLANE.) PARIS, June 5.—There is no use trying to hide the fact—we unhappy Parisians are ready to pick a quarrel with America and Americans. We hold you responsible for the demolition of our old, beloved Paris which was heretofore the most beautiful city in the world simply because of its harmony.

Now future threatens to replace the Paris of harmonious skyline by vast masses of masonry and iron which will rush and hide from sight our palaces, our churches, our theaters. And the sacrifice is due to you—to you who set the example of erecting forty-story buildings.

Even your architects come over to teach us the art of putting up "skyscrapers." So far, our municipal laws have partially checked the buildings of these monsters in the central quarters of Paris, but the suburbs are already disfigured with "Americanized" apartment houses and factory like buildings. The government has begun and it is too late to stop it.

Sooner or later the delicate, old world architecture of Paris will be swept away to make room for New York ideals of space, comfort and hugeness.

I have seen eight of the famous pictures which the king of the Belgians, greatly to the discontent of his subjects, sold the other day to a Paris art dealer. They used to hang in the palace of Lacken, the king's chateau, on the outskirts of Brussels, and went through the fire which destroyed one wing of the building in 1896.

The most admirable is Hobbema's picture "The Nut Under the Oaks." There are two sketches of Rubens, two small paintings by Thierry Halo, two by Teniers, one being the "Temptation of Saint Anthony," and Jan Steens' "Village Fete." It is said that Leopold II received $400,000 for them. The Hobbema, which was injured by the fire and afterwards restored, is held at $70,000, if it has not already been bought in by one of your millionaires. The city of Brussels itself has bought Van Dyck's portrait of the sculptor Duquesnois, author of that remarkable little statue which is loved by every good citizen of the Belgium capital. The price was only $30,000. Other masterpieces in the king's collection will be sold, I am informed, when the public clamor has died down a little. For his majesty needs money.

As you know, Moulou Rouge has failed. The Moulou Rouge, scene of many a ball of many a carnival—was known over half the world. Ask the casual stranger of New York or London to tell you about Paris and he will chuckle and say:

"The Moulou Rouge and Maxims."

HART M'KEE HAS FORMER WIFE SHADOWED

Pays Paris Sleuth $5000 to Spy on the Fair Cornelia

It Is all a Part of the Couple's Fight Over Their Child

PARIS, June 5.—Hartuppe McKee has just lost one of his interest in the doings of Mrs. Cornelia Constance Baxter-Twiss-McKee. His anxiety has grown keener since he learned the other day of her engagement to Count Apponyi, an Hungarian Austrian, who is an attaché of his country's embassy at Brussels.

In order to know exactly how his former wife lives, McKee hired one of the best detectives in Paris, named John Sarda. He is the clever detective who outwitted the Pinnerons when they were sent here some years ago by Hart's mother to look after him. Sarda is a great authority on "Paris by night." And for this as well as for his services as a detective, McKee paid him $5000. The present fight between McKee and his former wife is for the custody of the child of their marriage.

When Madame Constance, as the fair Cornelia is to be called, takes a new husband and adds his name to her own, she will have a list as long as that of a Spanish prince.

LADY WARWICK HAS HER CAR SMASHED

LONDON, June 5.—The Countess of Warwick has had a narrow escape from sudden death. Lady Warwick, accompanied by her maid, left Dunmow in Essex on Tuesday in her motor car, intending to pay a round of visits. Returning on Wednesday she was entering London when a motor omnibus, which has apparently escaped control, dashed down upon her car, smashing it into splinters. Wonderful to say, neither she nor her maid suffered anything but a violent shaking and a few bruises, which, though painful, did not prevent them from returning to Dunmow by train. Lady Warwick has so long been a prominent figure in London society and of late years has exerted herself so actively in the cause of socialism that there are few persons in England whose sudden death would produce so widespread an impression. "Miraculous escape" is the theme of general congratulation. Curiously enough the countess, who believes in spiritualism, had a message on Monday foretelling the accident.

MILITANTS ARE AGAIN AFTER CABINET

LONDON, June 5.—The militant suffragettes have resumed their attacks on members of the cabinet. Three suffragettes followed Premier Asquith to Devonshire, where he was to spend the holidays golfing. Unable to gain an entrance to the links in the day time, they climbed the wence at night and hung suffragette posters on every bough. After they climbed the fence at Clavely Court, where the premier is visiting with a distinguished house party, and hung posters on every bush in the lawn, pasted bills on the trunks of trees and draped the sundial with a canvas bearing the motto "Votes for women." The women walked ten miles in order to perpetrate this nocturnal surprise. Next day they were ejected from the hotel and compelled to return to London.

The militant suffragette bazaar closed with receipts of $10,000 with in a fortnight, which proves the tremendous public interest in the cause in London. Most of the members of the cabinet accept the suffragettes' attacks humorously. The problem is treated by each minister in a different way. Men who buttonhole him in Downing street or on the links Mr. Asquith is the embodiment of dignified sternness. Mr. Balfour is rather slack by the humor of their importunity. Lloyd George wears down their persistence by sheer imperturbability and patience. John Burns, who has suffered as much as any to whom Paris gossip ascribes suffragette attacks, stands no nonsense from them. He takes a stronger line than his colleagues.

A squad of suffragettes interrupted his speech at the opening of the tuberculosis exhibition in White Chapel. At first Mr. Burns tried to ridicule them; that failing, he summoned the police and had them forcibly ejected.

Duc de Choiseul, Engaged to American Heiress, Is Author of the Recent Rumors in City of Paris

PARIS, June 5.—A romance is acting down upon the Palais national in the Avenue Bois de Boulogne, where the Duc de Choiseul is a guest. This noble head of a distinguished French family, whose mother is an American woman and renowned beauty, is looking for an American wife. He has every chance of being married within a short time but he has not decided to whom Paris gossip credits Miss Mabel Paine of Baltimore as being the fiancée, but those who know most feel that to be untrue. The American girl of great attraction who dressed in such style and was recently launched in society here by Mrs. Harris has been seen in Paris as the most likely future duchess. This girl is Miss Mabel Paine. Choiseul is handsome and Miss Paine is pretty and ambitious, two reasons essentially sufficient to advance a love episode. Miss Mabel Paine has announced that she came to Paris to annex a duke or prince. She belongs to a family that has usually gone wherever it wants. She is a sister-in-law of Mr. Ambrose, a well-known citizen of San Francisco, who made himself conspicuous during the great financial crisis when he turned state's evidence against the ex-mayor.

Choiseul inherits from his mother enough American spirit to be willing to marry a pretty girl for her looks alone. Time Miss Mollie has a better chance of success than she had with the Prince de Croix, the business-like nobleman, who would have become engaged to Miss Mabel Paine had she not been so conspicuous during the great financial crisis when he turned state's evidence against the ex-mayor.

MEETING OF KISERS' CAUSE

Servia is the Trouble Spot and One Move May Start War

AMERICA CAN GIVE WORLD CAUSE FOR PEACE

Everyone Wonders What Stand Mr. Taft Is Going to Take

(By WILLIAM T. STEAD)

LONDON, June 5.—A meeting of more the current as to new trouble in the East. Servia which can ill afford to spend a red cent, is spending $11,500,000 upon armaments. In Belgrade it is believed that when Francis Joseph dies the new Emperor will, on his accession, develop an active aggressive policy and dash southward to Salonika. Germany, it is said, will support Austria in exchange for concession of Italy's way to Trieste.

Italy also unhesitatingly proposes to add $5,000,000 per annum for the next six years to her shipbuilding program. Pan-Slavonic movement is reviving. Dread of this may precipitate Austrian action before Russia recovers. There is much anxiety about the "Balkan situation." It is feared the old Sultan will be a rallying center for fanatical forces, the strength of which was horribly attested by the massacre in Adana. Europe, in fact, is in a condition of unstable equilibrium. If war once breaks out it may involve the whole continent.

On the other hand there are a few bright spots. Vigorous diplomatic endeavor to promote better feeling between Germans and British by international visits.

Nations Have Knives Out

But the people who make war are not those who enjoy these things. A curious paradox is that where there is no clash of interests between Germany and England each feels that the other may be unable to resist the temptations to seize a favorable opportunity if it arose to secure their own safety by knocking their menacing neighbor.

Another bright spot is the settlement of the "Case Blance" incident by The Hague court. Nothing seems more obvious than the judgment of the tribunal. But before the case could be got before the court nearly every power in Europe had to look war in the eyes.

It is doubtful whether it would ever have gone to arbitration but for the hint that whichever power refused to arbitrate would be regarded as justifying the armed assistance by other powers of the state which appealed to arbitration. It was the case when neither France nor Germany wished to fight. It is easy to imagine how difficult a task it would have been to get the case referred to The Hague if either France or Germany had believed the women propitious for war.

America's Responsibility

If the United States was to close its markets and ports to the commerce of any belligerent which under any pretense resists the promotion of peace, it would give the old world a guarantee for peace which it cannot supply from its own European resources. The peace congress in Chicago in May was very badly reported in the European press. But all European pacifists agree in recognizing America's right of initiative in promoting arbitration. What is being asked is, when the United States government intends to begin the international discussion necessary to secure agreement as to the constitution of the international permanent high court of arbitration.

At The Hague America carried the proposal to establish such a court. The conference agreed as to its procedure and authority, but being unable to agree as to the right of the smaller states to an equal share in the constitution on the judicial bench, the settlement of this knotty point was expressly relegated to diplomatic discussion between the two governments.

Question of Arbitration

It is obviously the American government which must begin such a discussion. Reports are current that Mr. Taft, before he left office, was feeling his way to an arrangement which would have satisfied Brazil and the smaller states, whose claims Dr. Barbosa championed so eloquently at The Hague.

What is Mr. Taft's government going to do about the matter? A further question as to obligatory arbitration was left over to be settled by a general treaty between the majority of the powers which were agreed on the principle. France, it was understood, intended to take the initiative in framing this treaty. But France has done nothing. Here at the ball has rolled the foot of Uncle Sam. What will he do with it?

Pachmann, the Great Pianist, Has What Is Called a 'Keeper'

LONDON, June 5.—Vladimir Pachmann, the great pianist whose eccentricities are as well known in New York as in London, has now become so wild in his habits that he has become unpopular everywhere by a friend-some people are bold enough to call him "a keeper." Many music-lovers have long cherished the idea that Pachmann's "monkey" of genius, but of late it is certain that the pianist has become so irresponsible in his actions that he has to be carefully watched.

The other day he was present, as one of the audience, at his friend's at a concert given at the Apollo Hall, and his remarks and interruptions were so loud and frequent that the management requested him to leave the place, and he was gently guided out by a friend. His remarks were entirely favorable to the young artist, who happened to be performing, but they interfered with the enjoyment of the audience.

At his last recital, given on a broiling hot afternoon, Pachmann went through all the gestures of wringing out his collar and his shirt to the intense amusement of his audience. He asked the ladies who clustered about him how they would like to "chopinate" on a day like that and kept up a running fire of conversation throughout the performance.

OAKLAND women of national interest are to be found in many walks of life. Their color and position are won by ability and brains. Some in the literary world have gained high recognition as poets, novelists and short story writers. Others are prominent actresses, who all are "home," with in diplomatic circles women who have received their education here, have followed their husbands to foreign courts, where they have been almost even by royal titles and romances have also played their part in the marriages of some.

In Literary Way

Among the women of this city, who have distinguished themselves in the literary world, are Mrs. Coolbrith, Eleanor Gates, Juliet Wilbur Tompkins, Margaret Cameron Smith and Katherine Markham. The Coolbriths' poems have won her recognition from many great writers as well as from a wide circle of readers. There are many who remember Miss Coolbrith as chief librarian in the Public Library, for she held that position for twenty years. When she first took the work in charge it was maintained by private subscription and it was largely due to her efforts that it was made a public institution. Miss Coolbrith has always lived a busy, useful life, and, as she expresses it, "most of it has been spent with the outside of books."

From the time she was a little girl, King verses came natural to her. She made little things about the trees and flowers later before she could write. When she grew older, and attended the first public school in Los Angeles, she used to write her compositions in verse.

Books of Verse

Such famous writers as Bret Harte, Mark Twain, Charles Warren Stoddard and Francis Mulford were intimate friends of the poetess. Miss Coolbrith's first book of collected verse was published in 1880, under the title of "A Poet's Day." "Songs from the Golden Gate," the second and last volume, was brought out in 1905. These two books have won her wide fame and brought letters of congratulations from all parts of the English speaking world. Miss Coolbrith has not been a prolific writer, because her busy life would not permit. The years during which most of her literary work was done, were between 1868 and 1874. Later she has not written a great deal. Her latest work appeared in the latest issue of the Century Magazine.

The Biscuit fever has passed by Miss Coolbrith and the Bernard Shaw craze has touched her but lightly. Browning, Tennyson and the Rossettis are among her favorite authors.

After her connections with this library were severed she went to take charge of the Mercantile Library in San Francisco and later became first librarian in the Buchanan Club. Since the five Miss Coolbriths has not been actively engaged. Over three thousand volumes of her personal collection were swept up in flames and many autograph letters from famous men were also destroyed, besides everything else she possessed.

After her connections with this library were severed she went to take charge of the Mercantile Library in San Francisco and later became first librarian in the Buchanan Club. Since the five Miss Coolbriths has not been actively engaged. Over three thousand volumes of her personal collection were swept up in flames and many autograph letters from famous men were also destroyed, besides everything else she possessed.

tered the State University. There Mr. Tully attended also, for he, too, had won a scholarship.

During the early struggles of the young author and her husband, Mrs. Phoebe Hearst aided them in many ways, having the strongest belief in the ability of them both, and time proved her judgment correct, for Mrs. Tully wrote one of the "six best sellers," while Mr. Tully, in collaboration with Balasco, wrote the "Rose of the Rancho," one of the most popular of recent plays.

Margaret C. Smith

Margaret Cameron Smith, privately, Mrs. Harry Lewis, now of New York, has gained recognition through her magazine stories and dramatic sketches. Mrs. Lewis' literary ability did not apparently develop when she was a girl and it was thought music was her strong point. Her mother gave her an excellent musical education and she often appeared as an accompanist. Her first work was done for an amateur dramatic society, which gave little plays in honor of the birthdays of John P. Irish at the Irish home. Among the members of the club at the time were Mrs. F. L. M. Fins, Miss George Cope, E. L. Benson and the late Mrs. Aldrich Barton. The players had difficulty in finding sketches that suited them, so Mrs. Lewis proceeded to write some little plays that were so successful she was induced to take a course in writing under W. C. Morrow.

Mrs. Lewis' first marriage was unhappy and it was after the separation that she became known in the literary world. Her second marriage has been happier and she is at present in the East with her husband.

Most of the work done by Mrs. Lewis has been for magazines, but she has a volume of collected sketches which are often given by amateur dramatic societies. The "Kleptomaniac" is particularly popular.

Mrs. Katherine Markham

Mrs. Katherine Markham, wife of Edwin Markham, the author of "The Man with the Hoe," is another woman of this city who has done magazine work and come into public gaze. Mrs. Markham was formerly a school teacher. Her maiden name was Miss Murphy. It is said by their intimate friends that the marriage of Mr. Markham and Miss Murphy was a union of poetic souls.

privately and was admitted to Vassar, where she was graduated in 1889.

For a time she was on the editorial staff of a San Francisco paper and left that position to become a member of the staff of the Munsey Magazine. Later she was made one of the editors of the Puritan. Many of her stories also appeared in Everybody, with which magazine she was connected for a time. She resigned from Everybody to do independent work. The many stories of the Oakland writer have never been collected but she has written a book which proved very popular. It was called "Doctor Ellen."

Arrived in "Books"

With her sister, Elizabeth Tompkins, she is keeping house in New York. Miss Elizabeth has also made for herself a place in the literary circles of the country. Her book entitled "Her Majesty," after its success as a story, was dramatized and has some popularity as a play. She has written for magazines, but her line has been more along stories of general interest than fiction.

The Tompkins family was once very prominent here. The family residence near San Leandro, called the Southern Farm, was afterwards sold to Edna Wallace Hopper. The large tract of land with which the father endowed the church, now filled by Professor John Fryer is situated near the Country Club. There has been some litigation over the land but the endowment now amounts to practically $37,000.

The romantic marriage of Miss Tompkins and Emory Tully, a short story writer, was not a happy one and they have been divorced. It is said that he fell in love with her through her writings. But the two artistic temperaments did not get on harmoniously. Since the separation the two sisters have been keeping house together.

Mrs. Charlemagne Tower

During the years her husband, Charlemagne Tower, was United States minister to Vienna, St. Petersburg and Berlin, Mrs. Tower was a great court favorite and considered a most refined and graceful woman. At the Russian court she was a particular favorite of the Czar.

It was President McKinley who first appointed Mr. Tower minister to Austria-Hungary, from where he was transferred to the Russian capital and later sent to the German court. Mr. Tower represented this country abroad about fourteen years, retiring in 1908.

The family is now residing in Philadelphia, where Mrs. Tower is an important social leader in the city of Brotherly Love.

There are many here who remember the old Smith residence on Castro street, where his hospitable master, the late G.

Frank Smith, an attorney, gathered many friends. It was in this home that the girls grew to womanhood and where they passed most of their lives up to the time of their marriage. Miss Nellie, who afterwards became Mrs. Tower, was born here and was married from the family residence. The other sisters are Mrs. L. Roy G. Hines, living in Mill Valley; Mrs. Robert F. Pratt, now of New York; and Mrs. Frederick Garrick of the same city. A brother, G. Howard Smith, is practicing law in New York.

Mme. Etienne Lanet

Another girl who has married a man in diplomatic circles is Mme. Etienne Lanet, formerly Miss Amy McKee, daughter of the late Judge Samuel Bell McKee, and sister of Attorney Samuel Bell McKee. M. Lanet is consul general at New York for the French government. The wedding of Miss McKee and the French diplomat was a recent event solemnized at the home of her brother, after which the young couple left to reside in New York.

The four years Victor Metcalf was in President Roosevelt's cabinet, Mrs. Metcalf is said to have attended more functions than any other woman in diplomatic circles and to have received at least an equal share of admiration. It was while Mr. Metcalf was secretary of the navy that the fleet made its trip around the world. Previous to his appointment as a cabinet officer Mr. Metcalf had been in congress for many years and his wife had always taken a prominent part in the social doings at the capital.

Mrs. Victor Metcalf

Although Mrs. Metcalf was born across the bay, she came to this city when a young girl. At first she attended Mills College but was graduated from Fields Seminary.

Like most women who lead a public life she is very fond of her home. In all the years she was at the capital, courted and admired, she has never been spoiled. Now in the quiet which has followed her strenuous years in Washington she is enjoying "the simple life." There was one thing which Mrs. Metcalf has said she learned from her life in diplomatic circles and that is to keep silent and the many amusing incidents which must have occurred she will never repeat.

Mrs. Cleveland Baker

Mrs. Cleveland Baker, formerly Pansy Perkins, daughter of Senator George C.

Perkins, was before her marriage, last fall, a prominent figure in the society of Washington, where she entertained in every detail. Since her marriage, Mrs. Baker has been living in Tonopah, for her husband is district attorney for Nye county.

Her wedding last December to Mr. Baker was a home affair, exquisite in every detail. Since her marriage, Mrs. Baker has been living in Tonopah, for her husband is district attorney for Nye county.

Mrs. Edna Funston

It was during war times that General Frederic Funston, who captured Aguinaldo in the Philippines, fell in love with the stately and handsome Edna Blankhart, of East Oakland. The Blankharts were guests of friends in Belvedere and no one else would be there, the host had said. When descending the stairs shortly after their arrival they were all surprised to see a little officer at the foot. It was love at sight with the general, who was then colonel of the Twentieth Kansas Infantry, but not so with Mrs. Funston. There had been a great deal made of the officers and the family were a little tired of them so the prospect of having one in the party for several days was not delightful.

It was just five weeks after they had met that the marriage of the general and his wife took place. The story is told that the general proposed on Sunday, was accepted and plans were made for the wedding to take place on Thursday, for the regiment had been ordered to sail for the Philippines on Friday.

Hurried Wedding

Monday night Mrs. Funston attended the theater with her sister and were met at the entrance by Funston, who was in a state of great agitation. The regiment had been ordered to sail on Wednesday. Would she marry him next day? This was a great surprise, but the plans were changed. Then Professor Kellogg of Stanford University was telegraphed for to come and act as best man. He and the general had been college mates in Kansas.

It was a pretty wedding, with decorations of flags and guns and after the ceremony the newly married couple ran round the block to give their friends a chance to throw rice at them, for the young officer had to leave his bride immediately and prepare to sail.

Two weeks after the regiment left Mrs. Funston followed and was in the islands when her husband captured the insurgent leader.

The career of the general in the islands won him his promotion first to the rank of brigadier-general, of the volunteers and later to that of general in the regular army. For some years he was in command of the department of California, but for the past year has been at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, as the commanding officer.

Mrs. Funston is at present visiting at the home of her parents on Tenth avenue, and the general intends to pass his vacation here also.

Stage Careers

At least three girls of this city have won fame on the stage. Nance O'Neill, Maxine Elliott, and her sister, Mrs. Forbes-Robertson, known on the stage as Miss Gertrude Elliott. Nance O'Neill, whose real name is Gertrude Lamson, lived here with her parents and was graduated from Snell's Seminary, where she was considered by her friends anything but promising material for the stage. When the desire to be an actress took possession of the miss, she went to the old Alcazar in San Francisco and furnished, it is said, much amusement for the people behind the scenes because of her unpraiseworthy.

She used to walk in front of the audience on every occasion that presented itself and the remarks that she made were not always complimentary. But she learned to walk in time and when a member of the cast playing in the Danites, fell ill she was given the part and succeeded so well that the attention of Mr. Rankin was called to her. After that she was given an opportunity to appear until today she is acknowledged one of the greatest tragedy actresses.

Miss Elliott and her sister, Mrs. Forbes-Robertson, are the daughters of a Maine sea captain, now living in East Oakland. Romance runs in the family. His first wife, the mother of the actresses, died some years ago, and then he married his first sweetheart. The captain has retired but he still loves the sea. His cozy home in East Oakland overlooks the entire bay.

Maxine Elliott

Maxine Elliott's maiden name was Jessie Dermot. Both she and her sister, Gertrude, were sent east to school and received many educational advantages.

Miss Elliott has not been so fortunate in her married life as her sister has. She was first married to a New York attorney who left a $30,000 law practice, it is said, to follow the turf and this broke up the family. The second matrimonial venture, when she became Mrs. Nat Goodwin, and of the divorce and subsequent marriage of the comedian to Edna Goodrich are unhappy parts of her life which have just recently passed.

Miss Elliott is an expert no die woman. She can make her own clothes and is very fond of domestic life.

Mrs. Forbes-Robertson

Mrs. Forbes-Robertson, wife of the English actor, has two little girls, named Maxine Mary and Jean Adelaide. Mrs. Elliott is very fond of her little nieces and has given them many substantial presents, for she has no little ones of her own. Both the actresses are

AT THE THEATRE

JOHN DREW IN "JACK STRAW" AT THE MACDONOUGH

MACDONOUGH

Managers Leverich and Campbell, of the Princess Theater company, of San Francisco, on account of having booked a famous Italian grand opera company at their San Francisco playhouse, are enabled, for the first time, to send their company on a short tour of the State.

"Puff, Puff," a merry musical comedy, which had quite a vogue in New York and eastern centers, and has been produced in San Francisco records at the Princess, will be shown in Oakland, as presented by the company at the Macdonough.

It is decided to carry the entire performance on the road, including every bit of scenic investment, all the elaborate electrical effects, the entire cast and musical equipment. The entire stage force of the Princess Theatre is included in the organization and the play will be seen in its original role.

"Sandman" May Boley will be seen as Mrs. Lillian-Montague. Scott Benson will wield the baton and Ed Temple will direct the stage. The famous chorus of forty singers, pretty as well as to be seen also on Monday, June 14, at the Macdonough Theater One performance only.

JOHN DREW

John Drew hasn't had a better role than the one he is playing this season in "Jack Straw" since he became a star. Mr. Drew in this play makes his first appearance as a writer in a swaggy London hotel in a beard that he evens to one of his friends is false.

It is just the kind of role that Mr. Drew likes to play and the kind that he knows how to play better than any other actor on the American stage. He will be seen in it at the Macdonough Theater, June 15 and 16, with matinee on Wednesday.

JOHN DREW

John Drew has scored such a success in "Jack Straw" the comedy by W. Somerset Maugham in which he will be seen here, that Chas. A. Frohman, his manager, has bought another piece for him from the same author, to be given next fall. Mr. Drew played at the Empire Theater in New York for four months and he is on a tour now that will not conclude until late in the summer.

ORPHEUM

One of the biggest hits ever made at the Oakland Orpheum was scored in 1907 by the great dancing act known as "The Sunway South," this act having been one of the headline features on the opening bill at the Orpheum when that theater made its bow to the public on September 23, 1907. This act returns today as one of the leading features of an exceptionally strong vaudeville program, the remainder of the bill being up to the high standard always set by the Orpheum.

"Smiley South" is, as the name suggests, an ensemble of plantation melodies, performed by ten colored comedians and singers. The stage setting represents a beautiful Southern home, with a bit of romantic Southland, and the negro characters in it the distance.

For Donald and Meta Carson will present next week at the Orpheum a short comedy sketch which just now, when "chuckle" humor is so popular, is most timely. It is called "Alex McDonald's Dream" and abounds in Scotch songs, dances and wit. Mr. McDonald is a genuine Scotch comedian, who enjoys an immense popularity in Edinburgh and other Scotchland cities, while Meta Carson is a blonde beauty who sings the songs of her native land and performs her national dances very charmingly.

After the La-Velle Trio newcomers to the Orpheum circuit, will make their appearance in this city next week. They are a clever and unique comedy act. Mr. LaVelle and Miss LaVelle are remarkably good riders and Mr. Ackerman is a fine comedian.

Adler, whose catch and popular vaudeville made her an immense favorite at the vaudeville theaters of this city will be included in the attractions of next week. This will be Adler's first appearance at the Orpheum, but she is sure of a most cordial reception.

The Countess Rossi and M. Paul, whose unique act has created a sensation during the week, will be retained in the program. The beautiful Danube and the songs of her offering, which will make the attraction well worth while. The LaVelle Trio of dancers, who have been one of the principal features during the last week, will give their unique dances and songs, which will be called "A Night in the Blue."

Low Sully, the famous musical, will have new songs and stories wherewith to amuse the laughter loving crowds. Hawthorne and Burt in vaudeville comedies will indulge in new songs and conversation.

BELL

With "The Bernhardt of Vaudeville," Mr. Harry LeClair and Miss Zay Holland, the distinguished violin virtuoso and comedienne on the same bill, the Bell Theater offers a program certain to please and delight the patrons of this popular house this week. Every number of an exceedingly interesting program has merit and will without question score big.

Harry LeClair, known and billed throughout the circuit as "The Bernhardt of Vaudeville," will be an immense favorite with Bell patrons in his satirical impersonations of famous actors. He differs materially from the usual run of female impersonators, in that he does not overdo effeminacy. As a special feature for this season Mr. LeClair portrays a travestied imitation of the "Trilby" with music from Gounod's "Faust."

The zenith of art in the music world is represented in the clever and marvelously intelligent rendering of the famous masterpieces on the violin by Miss Zay Holland.

Another musical act finds a place on the bill in the number furnished by the Elito Four, who appear in atty uniforms and render a pleasing program upon various musical instruments. Selections from the classics are interspersed with rattling ragtime. A special engagement of Sydney Grant presages crowded houses, just to hear this real funny comedian. His comedy is legitimate and he tells one good story after another winding up with a Chinese impersonation that is sure to bring down the house.

Two premier comedy cyclists appear in the persons of Count De Butz and Richard Tossell.

YE LIBERTY

Commencing tomorrow evening, Landers Stevens enters into the last week of his long season as leading man at Ye Liberty Playhouse and as a fitting end to an engagement of upward of four years, it is but natural that the management of Ye Liberty should select as his closing bill the piece in which his most notable success was achieved, "Old Heidelberg," for an elaborate revival next

Landers Stevens, of course, plays the role of the Prince, unquestionably the finest characterization he has ever given during his long career in Oakland. Helen Holmes should be sweetly sympathetic as Kathie, his sweetheart, and should look the little girl still in love with him. former and the music rendered by the Navassars is on a par with the greatest male organizations of the country. Their first concert at Idora will be given on Thursday afternoon. Later the Conway band, two daily concerts will be given, one in the afternoon at 3 o'clock and the other in the evening, beginning at 8 o'clock.

The acrobatic feats at Idora still attract wide attention. The return engagement of the Peerless Potters has met with delight on every side, for this family is considered to be the premier acrobatic family of the country. They have been the feature acrobatic attraction with the Ringling Brothers' circus and have appeared in nearly every country of Europe. Besides the Potters, there is the Bruno-Kramer Trio of European acrobats and ring artists.

BROADWAY

"When the Bell Tolls," an unusual and powerful production, will be the offering of the Broadway Theater next evening, commencing Monday night. The play is set in the Alps, and some of the most powerful scenes are in and about the St. Bernard monastery. One particularly striking scene is when the blind hero is led over snow and ice to the heroic lost and near death in the rugged Alps. The tragic element of the play is contrasted with some delightful comedy—light and shade, laughter and tears flash quickly through it. The women's parts are exceptionally strong and tragic, and the tense situations are happily broken by comedy.

A faithful servant, a monk and an artist are among the men characters. The three women's parts are taken by Miss Priscilla Knowles, Miss Claire Sinclair and Miss George Woodthorp.

VALENCIA

The last performance of "The Donagh" with Arthur Cunningham in his rollicking role of "Lanty Killy," will take place at the Valencia Theater, San Francisco, this Sunday afternoon and evening and on Monday night. Donagh is the greatest play, "The Colleen Bawn," will be staged with all the favorites of the Valencia stock company in the cast. Mr. Cunningham in the wonderful part of Miles MacCoppelan.

Pretty Edith Lyle will make a winning Colleen Bawn. Grace Travers will have the equally good part of Ann Chute. Lillian Andrews will have a role that fits her to a nicety as Sheila and Kora Kenwyn will be Mrs. Oregan. Paul McAllister will be Hardress. George Osborne will have a congenial role as Father Tom and Robert Homans, Charles Dow Clark, Edward Clisbee, Robert McKim and important others will complete the cast.

Mr. Cunningham will sing, for the first time on any stage, "The Flag That We Love to See Fly," by W. O. McGeehan, the well-known journalist. "The Crusader," "The Old Maid Shawl" and "The Colleen Bawn," while "The Pretty Girl Minding the Cow" and "Limerick the Beautiful" will be sung by other members of the cast.

Mrs. Fiske and her company from the Manhattan Theater, New York, will begin a two weeks' engagement in "Salvation Nell," Monday, June 14.

PORTLAND'S ROSE CARNIVAL PLANS

Northern Fiesta Will Be on More Extended Lines Than Ever Before in Its History

PORTLAND, Ore., June 6.—Many times more elaborate than in any previous year, Portland's annual Rose Carnival and Fiesta will occur this year during the week of June 7 to 12. More pains have been taken with the rose carnival this year because of the fact that the city will contain many Easterners on route to the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition at Seattle, which opens June 1. From the moment the President at Washington touches the electric button at noon, June 7, which will inaugurate the festivities, until Saturday midnight, when Rex Oregon takes his departure, the city will give itself over to one continuous round of entertainment, parades, receptions, sports and races. On the initial day the city will be the host of Rear Admiral Ichi and his staff, and in their honor a $25-a-plate banquet will be held in the evening. More than 2,000 invitations have been issued to this affair. Tuesday and Wednesday the annual rose exhibition will be held in Portland's famous forestry building. The chief parades are the decorated rubberneck wagon parade on Wednesday and the "Spirit of the Golden West" pageant Thursday night. Included in this will be a cherry blossom parade by local Japanese. Also on this night the Chinese of Portland have promised to bring out their green dragon, a hideous fire-breathing serpent 800 feet long. The sight of the dragon is looked forward to by Portland even, as it is only at intervals of years that the Chinese exhibit it.

OCEAN CABLES.

Ocean Cables.—The diameter of the Atlantic cable varies according to the depth of the water, the character of the bottom on which it lies, and the probabilities of interference from anchors. It is smallest in mid-ocean depths. There is little or no movement at the bottom, and it is important that the cable should not have great weight. A heavy cable in deep water would be difficult to bring up for repairs if such were needed. In the shallower water a heavier type of cable is used. The types are known as "short end," "intermediate," and "deep sea." The diameters of the commercial cables are: Shore end 2 1/2 inches; intermediate, 1 3/4 inches; deep sea, 1 inch.

PASTOR AND LODGE FOUNDER ARRESTED

Rev. Dr. D. J. Wilson and Son Charged With Simulating Masons

ST. LOUIS, June 6.—Rev. Dr. Darius J. Wilson, past supreme regent and one of the founders of the Royal Arcanum, and also one of the founders of the Knights of Honor, has been arrested with his son, Dr. James Wilson, in their suite at the Planters' Hotel, charged with obtaining money under false pretenses.

Dr. Wilson, who is attending the annual meeting of the Supreme Council of the Royal Arcanum, now being held at the Planters' Hotel, and his son, were compelled to remain locked in a cell of the hotel for several hours owing to their inability to reach members of the council, who were absent yesterday afternoon on a river trip.

Makes Complaint

Special Officer Oeta Chrimmer of the Central District and E. C. Graulich, an assistant yardmaster of the 7th Street Railroad Association, residing at 4219 Vista Avenue, who made the original complaint, allege that they each paid the son $5 after receiving three degrees of the so-called Masonic Egyptian rites. The son assured them that they would obtain their membership in the Egyptian lodge would obtain them entire to save the lodge from the Ancient, Free and Accepted Masons.

Both Rev. Wilson and his son deny this statement, and say they will use an application blank signed by Chrimmer and Graulich as their defense. "The blank sets forth that the application is being made with the full knowledge that the lodge is not part of nor in any way connected with and gives no promises in the lodge of any money as gratification under the grand lodges of the different states, and generally known as the grand lodges of Free and Accepted, or the Ancient, Free and Accepted Masons."

Dr. Wilson, who is a deputy to his father, denies that he told the special officer and Graulich that their money would obtain recognition from the other lodges, but did tell them that the signals and signs were similar.

Receive Complaints

Several complaints have been received recently by Chief of Police Creery concerning the Egyptian lodge. Chief Creery, who is a thirty-second degree Mason, referred the complaints to Captain Young of the Central District, also a Mason.

Both Rev. Wilson and his son expressed indignation at their arrests.

"It is a shame to arrest a man who has given all he possessed to establish institutions for the lodge," the son said. "My father and mother have given everything they own, even real estate, and it is absurd even to presume he would do anything dishonest. I am a deputy, trying to organize a chapel in St. Louis. The money does not remain in my possession, and knowing the law as I do, it would be folly on my part to attempt anything illegitimate."

YOUTH HAS MADE $100,000 IN WHEAT

ST. LOUIS, June 6.—With his twenty fifth birthday still to come, William M. Aubuchon Jr. has made a little more than $100,000 by following the lead of James A. Patten in wheat deals, out of a working capital of less than $1000.

Aubuchon traded exclusively on three cent margins. He declines to admit how much less than $1000 he invested, but he turned his capital many times and reaped all of his profits.

When it was known that Patten was building up a corner he determined to get in at the psychological moment and get out before the moment ended. It was Mr. Aubuchon's first venture in the market, but he has been educated in careful business tactics and tutored skillfully.

OAKLAND, CAL., SUNDAY, JUNE 6, 1909

1. Said Mother Goose, "Come on with me, and we will go the sights to see."
As they walked down a crooked lane, dried apples it began to rain.
Said Doctor Foster in surprise, "My! What an awful waste of pies!"

2. Skip, hop, flippity flop, and then they reached a baker shop.
"Hot pies! All alive! Tuppence apiece, or three for five."
Cats and snails and puppy dog tails; some in pans and some in pails.

3. Three blind men sat in a row, needing sight and kneading dough.
"Knead we much, for much we need. Satisfy the baker's greed.
Hee, ho! back and toe, night and day we knead the dough."

4. Then they met old Mr. Spratt. They called him Jack (he ate no fat).
His wife swore she would eat no lean. This way they licked the platter clean.
A nice arrangement—so you see, they lived in perfect harmony.

5. They came across a guinea pig, who for the children danced a jig.
The lion and the unicorn played on a drum and silver horn.
And little Tommy Tittlemouse invited them into his house.

6. They rode a cockhorse to Banbury Cross, and dined upon crumpets and gooseberry sauce.
They met an old man with a crooked old leg, who said beans and spinach were all he could beg.
"It's time to retire now," old Mother Goose said, and old Doctor Foster put them into bed.

The Smartest Fashions of Well-Dressed Folk

The Bride's Good-Bye

MY DEAR MADGE:
Yesterday I went to Sallie Perkins' wedding, the first of the weddings I have attended this June. There was such a fascinating arrangement of color that I must write and tell you all about it. In the first place, the bride wore white and carried white roses, while her bridesmaids all carried sweet peas and were dressed to harmonize with the various colors of that wonderful flower. In other words, Sallie's wedding was a pastel one, each bridesmaid wearing one of the light shades made so famous by Turner and his ilk; and each of the shades was, of course, selected to suit the wearer. One of the bridesmaids, having red hair, wore a crepe de chine dress in the lightest shade of blue, while her opera coat (you know they all followed the bride to say good-bye) was of satin fastened down either side with covered buttons.

Another of the bridesmaids, with black hair, wore a gown of pink crepe de chine, while her coat was of a deeper shade of rose.

Still another maid wore a yellow gown, with a coat of darker yellow; while the maid of honor wore a pale shade of green, representing the stem of the flower formed by the other maidens.

The hats which the bridesmaids wore were picturesque, high-crowned affairs of natural straw, and each one was trimmed with a long willow plume to match the color of the gown.

After the reception the bride and bridegroom departed and started upon their travels, and the send-off they received was, to say the least, hilarious. Every one threw confetti, every one said good-bye, and all of the neighbors were drawn from their houses to watch the excitement. The bride came downstairs dressed for departure in a suit of purple cloth, with a black satin belt run through the material of the coat below the waist line and fastened with a buckle on the side. The lapels and cuffs of the coat were of black satin to match the belt, while her hat was of purple straw trimmed with black velvet ribbon. Her costume was very effective, and to give the quaint touch she carried a reticule of gray satin covered with black net.

After the wedding a few of us had a party in the country. Your devoted sister, ELEANOR.

Summer is with us and the larger social affairs are practically at an end until after vacation days. Two large events of the week will be the at home to be given tomorrow by Mrs. C. S. Chamberlain at her home, Forti-fifth street and San Pablo avenue. Mrs. Chamberlain is a very deeply loved woman who has been prominently identified with the social and charitable work of the city for many years. Her kindly smile has been the most pleasant greeting to many a child at the vacation playground during the past two summers and wherever these children came a glimpse of her face brought them joy.

This year Mrs. Chamberlain will not be present at the vacation playground, as she is leaving for the east on Wednesday for a visit of several months. The work is left in competent hands but the boys and girls will surely miss the kind lady who always had a pleasant word and smile for each little pupil.

The guests of tomorrow will include the members of the Oakland Club of which Mrs. Chamberlain has long been an officer. It will be an opportune time to wish the vacation season adieu.

Another large affair of the week will be the reception and tea which Mrs. George H. Perry is giving in honor of her new daughter-in-law, Mrs. Harold Perry, on Wednesday.

mother-in-law is a leader. Mrs. Perry will be assisted in receiving by a half dozen intimate friends.

The members of the Cosmos Club are going out to Hayward tomorrow to be the guests of Mrs. Will Meek and incidentally enjoy a cherry toast.

There will be several pretty home weddings solemnized during the coming week, the brides of the week to include Miss Marion Burdick, Miss Evelyn Cavall, Miss Roberta Mills and Miss Lelia Barlow.

Miss J. Walter Scott, who is soon to leave for a trip to Alaska, is to be the guest of honor tomorrow afternoon at a card party to be given by Mrs. George Scott. She is to share the honors of the day with Miss George Loudon.

Mrs. A. C. Holtz will be a hostess of Tuesday evening asked a half hundred friends for bridge.

Many small affairs will be given during the week which will keep the socially inclined active.

MILITARY CONTEST.

The semi-annual term-end drill and military contest for the Hauser trophy occurred Friday morning at Franklin Grammar School No. 2. In the presence of a large number of spectators. Much interest has been shown for some time past in preparation for this event by the pupils, many of whom have been aiding voluntarily at recesses, noon hours, and after school, in order to make themselves as proficient as possible for the final contest. The results of their efforts were very manifest when the 600 or more pupils of the school army drills solemnized during the coming week, the brides of the week to include Miss Marion Burdick, Miss Evelyn Cavall, Miss Roberta Mills and Miss Lelia Barlow.

The judges of the contest were Commodore Wilbur and Hayes of Lyon Post, G. A. R., while Superintendent of Schools Geo. W. Frick presented the trophy, a beautiful cup donated to the school by Mr. M. L. Hauser.

After a very close contest the judges awarded the trophy to Company G, Second Regiment, commanded in the absence of Captain Myrtle Graham, by Lieutenant Mary Mesinger and Doris Westheimer.

TO OBSERVE ANNIVERSARY.

Catholic Ladies' Aid Society, Branch 25, will celebrate its first anniversary with an "at home," to be given in the parish hall of the church of the Sacred Heart, Forty-first and Grove streets, Thursday, June 10, from 2:30 until 5 o'clock. The ladies of the organization are making elaborate plans for the affair, which is to close the work of one year. There will be a brief resume of the work accomplished during the past year, followed by an informal musical and cards for those who enjoy that diversion. Invitations have been extended to the grand officers to the board of grand officers and also to the members of the branches in the bay region.

The officers of Branch 25 are: President, Mrs. D. Campbell, senior vice-president, Mrs. D. M. McCarthy, junior vice-president, Mrs. M. G. Dwyer, treasurer, Mrs. James Garland, corresponding secretary, Mrs. E. C. Summers, marshal, Mrs. J. Donovan.

The reception committee for Thursday will include Mrs. M. Coleman, Mrs. J. M. McElroy, Mrs. G. T. Wheeler, Mrs. H. Rowe, Mrs. L. Kehoe, Mrs. J. P. Rowley, Mrs. H. Thwell, Mrs. E. Cavanaugh, Mrs. A. Shepard, Mrs. J. M. Hyland, son.

A most delightful afternoon is anticipated, as the members of this branch are sparing no efforts in making the afternoon a red letter day in the annals of the organization. Light refreshments will be served during the afternoon.

TO APPEAR IN CONCERT.

The concert to be given by Miss Mahel Riegmann at the Macdonough theater on Tuesday evening, June 8, is attracting the attention of the society folks and musicians of the bay region. This will be the only opportunity for hearing this talented young artist during her visit to the coast.

During the four years which Miss Riegmann has been in Germany she has fulfilled the predictions made for her by Madame Gaski, her musical god-mother. This talented musician gained her early training from Louis Chopin, to whose perfect instruction she is indebted for the building and placing of her voice. While in Germany she has been under the personal instruction of Madame Schroeder-Chaloupka of Stuttgart, who was the teacher of Madame Gaski. Such rapid strides were made in her work that she was signed for a three years' contract at the Municipal theater, in Stuttgart, two of which have already passed.

She has appeared in all of the soubrette roles of the lighter operas, and has received the most favorable criticisms from the German critics.

The Macdonough theater will surely be filled on Tuesday evening with the thousands of the young artists, who will be anxious to hear what this dainty protégée of Madame Gaski has accomplished.

CHARMING AFFAIR.

At a charming affair given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. W. Norman Ambrose at her home in East Oakland, the engagement of Miss Irene Hamblin and Royal Miller was announced.

The dainty bride-elect is a Berkeley girl, a member of the Alpha Sigma. Her fiancé is also a resident of the college town and is grand president of the Theta Chi fraternity.

The rooms were prettily decorated with pink sweet peas and dainty ferns. Cards furnished the diversion of the afternoon and at the conclusion of the game a dainty supper was served.

The wedding of the young people will be an event of the coming winter. Among those who shared the pleasure of the afternoon were:

Miss Elsie Horton, Miss Helen Dyer, Miss Helen Forde, Miss Shriver Jones, Miss Alice Boston, Miss Rita Pack, Miss Margaret Witter, Miss Ruth Hamblin, Miss Elizabeth Smilie, Miss Ruby Newsum, Miss Elsie Campbell, Miss Evelyn Adams, Miss Charlotte Wolfe, Miss Gertrude Newman, Miss Grace Griffiths, Miss Alice Powell.

PERSONALS.

Mrs. Harry Caplin is the guest of Miss J. W. Landbeck in Madera.

M. J. Layman was in Bakersfield last week.

Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Hall and Miss Jane Croft are registered at the Sea Beach Hotel, in Santa Cruz.

Mrs. A. J. Bradley is visiting her sister, Mrs. Charles Henderson, in Stockton.

M. Atwell and wife were in Kern last week.

Peter Causibens and Peter Lassalle have returned from an enjoyable visit with relatives and friends in Mariposa.

Miss Vivian Vane has returned from San Andreas, where she was a guest of her sister, Mrs. F. Sargent.

Miss Ida Nicobauer is visiting the Muskus ranch in San Andreas.

Mrs. Amanda Cornejo is the guest of Mrs. Crawford of Jangworth.

Mrs. H. B. Nichols and daughter are guests at the home of Judge and Mrs. J. M. O'Neill in Yreka.

Mrs. Thomas Simpson has returned from Sacramento, where she was the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Crouch.

H. Anderson and Mr. and Mrs. L. A. French were registered at Sacramento hotels last week.

CLOSING MEETING.

The "Ladies of the Round Table" gave their last evening party for the year on Tuesday evening, June 8, at the Macdonough theater. The affair was a most enjoyable one, and the ladies and their knights most royally. This club contributes much to the social life of Oakland and there is nothing spared to place their evenings among the most perfectly appointed functions given. The club limits the membership to fifteen, as they meet in the homes of the members and there is a long list waiting the opportunity to join. Mrs. Joseph had cards and music for diversion, a sumptuous supper concluding a most delightful evening. During the month the club will give a benefit entertainment for Pilgrim Congregational Church Sunday school and they promise something very amusing.

BIRTHDAY PARTY.

Mrs. J. A. Anderson entertained at her home, 1025 Adeline street, last week, the birthday anniversary of her niece, Miss Gladys Wright.

The rooms were attractively decorated for the occasion with a profusion of pink blossoms combined with ferns and other greens. Hearts furnished a pleasant diversion, after which music and dancing were enjoyed until a late hour.

A daintily appointed supper rounded out the pleasure of the evening. The guests list included:

Miss Helen Stiles, Leif Jensen, Miss Lorena Parr, Frank Anderson, Miss Zella Cook, Roy Crossman, Miss Isabella Goff, Chas. Bessor, Miss Parker, Mrs. Hawley, Miss Rose Sagehorn, Dr. Dickerson, Miss Hazel Payne, Dr. Donley, Miss Vera Davison, Mr. Volker, Miss Ethel Davidson, Mr. Parker, Miss Gladys Wright, Mr. Besser.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED.

An engagement announcement of much interest to the many friends of the groom about the bay, is that of Miss Paul Moore, Miss Brown's father was for years interested in the Saginaw Lumber Company, of Saginaw, Michigan, but is now interested in the oil industry in Louisiana.

Mr. Moore is a native of Oakland and graduated from College College, which institution his father, the late Samuel B. Moore, was president. Miss young Moore is a popular member of the young couple are crowding the prenuptial days with complimentary affairs.

The wedding will be solemnized in St. Stephens' Episcopal Church, Hollywood, June 20.

DELIGHTFUL TRIP.

Miss Emmabelle Zucker left on Thursday for an automobile trip to Los Angeles as a guest of Mrs. Ida H. Gorrill and Mr. Charles H. Hittchock. During the trip the party will be the guests of the A. W. Gorrills at their ranch in Ventura. They expect to be away a month or longer.

Miss Zucker is an exceedingly talented girl and a general favorite among a large circle of friends. She is petite in figure of the brunette type and extremely vivacious. Her work in burnt wood and leather has attracted much attention from the art critics.

She has just completed an artistic cedar chest and a burnt skin evening, which have been very much admired.

A YEAR OF TRAVEL.

Miss Hazel Chase, an attractive daughter of Mrs. B. B. Chase, accompanied by her mother, will leave on June 14 for a year of travel. They will remain for several months in the eastern states and there is a prospect of their extending a brief trip to Europe. Miss Chase is identified with the younger set and was a member of this year's graduating class of the Oakland High school. Her picture is presented today on the society page.

WHIST TOURNAMENT.

Mrs. E. A. Harrett of Berkeley, assisted by Miss Sara Day, whose picture is presented today, and Miss Elton Robinson, will give a whist tournament on Thursday evening, June 10, for the benefit of the Japanese booth of St. Augustine's fair.

Mrs. Celia A. White, a prominent member of St. Augustine's, has generously tendered her villa at the corner of Ward and Ellisworth street, Berkeley, for the affair.

land Home, the Ladies' Relief and the Fred Finch Orphanage for a day's outing on Wednesday, June 10.

A group of children from the Fred Finch Orphanage will give a little cantata during the afternoon, which will add to the pleasure of those present.

MARWOOD CLUB.

Mrs. Charles Rechner entertained the ladies of the Marwood Club on Thursday last when the club met for the fortnightly game of whist. The attractive Berkeley home was charmingly decorated for the afternoon, cut flowers and greens being effectively distributed throughout the rooms. The game was a most enjoyable one, all of the players scoring the highest for the season. Mrs. V. Rechner captured first prize with Mrs. A. E. Wilkinson second. Mrs. Rechner was given the usual hostess prize and to Mrs. Charles Cameron fell the honor.

The hostess served a very dainty luncheon after the game and the ladies enjoyed a pleasant informal hour before adjourning. On Tuesday, the 10th Mrs. Lillenthal is to entertain the club at her home in Eighteenth street.

LUNCHEON AT COUNTRY CLUB.

Singer and Madame Fremont (Zelle de Lussan) were the guests of honor at a luncheon given at the Country Club on Thursday by Mrs. Eugene Henden and Miss Eleanor Connell. Before going to the club the complimentary guests enjoyed a motor ride in the suburbs.

FOR SOUTHERN VISITORS.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Hollywood entertained on Thursday evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Hatch of Los Angeles who are here visiting their many old friends. Tuesday evening of next week Mr. and Mrs. Hatch will entertain for those popular guests.

WEEK END GUEST.

Miss Laura J. Wyllie is spending the week-end as the guest of the Misses Hall in Suisun. While away she will attend the dance to be given by the graduating class of the Fairfield school.

TO VISIT FAIR.

The Misses Mary and John Tison are leaving on Monday evening for an extended visit to Portland and Seattle. They will be joined by relatives in Seattle, and together will visit the fair.

WILL VISIT RELATIVES.

Miss Rosalind West left Friday evening for Moscow, to visit relatives and friends. She will be accompanied home by her mother.

HOME CEREMONY.

The wedding of Miss Edna Walker and Miss Edna Walker will be solemnized this evening at the home of the bride's parents on Emerson street, Berkeley, at 7 o'clock. Only the relatives and a few intimate friends have been invited for the pretty ceremony.

The bride-elect is a very attractive girl, tall and of blonde coloring. Since the announcement of her engagement she has been the recipient of several showers from her friends, who have contributed many useful articles to add to the pretty new home which the young man has prepared for his bride.

CARD CLUB LUNCHEON.

Mrs. James F. Peck entertained on Thursday at a charmingly appointed luncheon at Claremont Country Club. The delightful afternoon was planned as the last meeting of the season of one of the smaller 500 clubs, whose members are Mrs. A. J. Alvord, Mrs. James F. Peck, Mrs. C. E. Corvill, Mrs. F. L. Daly, Mrs. J. W. Post, Mrs. J. Harris, Mrs. George, Mrs. C. Cummins, Mrs. T. Foster, Mrs. Daniel, Mrs. F. Edwards, Mrs. R. J. Hall.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED.

The engagement is announced of Miss Abigail Lowell Cameron, youngest daughter of Hugh M. Cameron, and John Bennett Wallace of Wickenburg, Pa. Miss Cameron is in training as a nurse at St. Mary's hospital in San Francisco, where she is to graduate this summer. Mr. Wallace is a railroad contractor with business interests in the East. The marriage will be an event of the early autumn. It is not decided where they will make their home after the wedding.

SAD JOURNEY.

Byron Rutley returned yesterday morning with the remains of his father-in-law, George A. Hough, who for many years was a well known resident of the city. He was prominently known as a builder and contractor. A few years ago he moved to Portland, but was preparing to return to this city. His death, which was sudden, came as a great shock to his relatives and friends. Mr. Hough was seventy-nine years of age and prominent in Masonic circles. He leaves four daughters and one son to mourn his loss.

AT HOME.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Schneider will be "at home" to their friends this afternoon and evening. They have recently taken possession of their new home on Grand avenue and Perkins street and the affair of this afternoon will be in the nature of a house-warming. Mrs. Schneider is the vice-president of the First Hebrew congregation of this city.

DAUGHTER MARRIED.

Mr. and Mrs. Lavin H. Bicker, who are now making their home in Stockton, have been up to their Berkeley home in Spring street, where the marriage of their daughter, Josephine, and Mr. Littchen was solemnized. The bridegroom is a well known young business man of Stockton.

The Woman Who Knows

The woman who knows how silk gloves differ looks for "Kaysers" in the hem.

And she looks for the guarantee.

For she knows that Kaysers are the finest silk gloves in existence, as they have been for 25 years.

She knows that poor gloves cost as much as the Kaysers, and never wear half so long.

She wants the Kayser fabric, fit and finish and the Kayser double up.

All women want Kaysers, but some women don't get them because they don't look in the hem.

WHY WEAR BLACK for MOURNING

Scientific and Psychological Reasons for the Wearing of White as a Symbol of Grief

THE substitution of white for black as a mourning color is rapidly gaining a world wide consideration, and authorities on women's gowns and conventional etiquette declare that it is only a question of time before the dolorous and sombre trappings of death are forever done away with.

To some women black is undeniably becoming and for the reason a number of the newly bereaved will cling to the sable hue of custom, though that custom change.

One reason why black is thought to be universally becoming is that it restores the dignity of the veil, whose folds always add character and grace.

Black also gives unity of effect and prevents mistakes; so many rabbitlike natures burrow in it, but in a few years it deadens all taste and individuality.

Of course there are women whose choice is so bad that their friends pray for death, some one's death, to relieve their sufferings; we need not take them as examples any more than all the world need do itself up in black because it's fancy in London.

Black clears a fresh skin, but is a cruel neighbor to suffering and sorrow, for it deepens every line and hardens every expression.

It may be softened by the coquettish widow's cap, which formerly was not coquettish at all, as it was adopted from the custom in many lands of shaving widows' heads that they might be attractive to no other man. To our eyes the line of white is never so bewitching as when confining a mass of tangled hair above violet eyes that say, "I'm only in half mourning, but I could make it quarter—and the last quarter, too—if some one loved me."

Black satin is the most disagreeable of all, especially to stout figures, as it emphasizes with its stove polish just the lines most desirable to conceal.

It is little worn in England, there being a prejudice against it, as a woman was once hanged in black satin. Whether she was hanged because she wore black satin or not no one can say. Her name was Mrs. Robinson.

Of course, there are women who turn out well in black, but the individual types usually young, with a French call "mat" complexion and poets term "alabaster" clear but not sleek looking.

Feathers, lace and soft edges take the curves from black.

There is a German type that wears great chain bracelets and black cameo heads and looks the matron of a full, making a fine effect in suit brocades and beaded plumes.

Blond children are pathetic in black, with lace knees and white socks, but it is cruel to put it on them.

Black and white is becoming to many people and can be worn with all degrees of business and refinement. It signifies mourning and love.

HOW THEY MADE SOUTHERN FLAGS

General W. L. Cabell of Texas Tells How the Banners of Confederacy Were Made

CHATTANOOGA, June 5.—The preparations now being made throughout the South for the reunion of veterans makes of unusual interest at the present time a statement made a number of years ago by General W. L. Cabell of Dallas, Tex., in regard to how and where the battle flags of the Confederacy were designed.

General Cabell is commander of the Trans-Mississippi Veterans. He declares the following to be a true history of the flag.

"When the Confederate army, commanded by General Beauregard and the Federal army confronted each other at Manassas, it was seen that the Confederate flag and the Stars and Stripes looked at a distance so much alike that it was hard to distinguish one from another.

General Beauregard, after the battle of the 15th of July, at Blackburn Ford, ordered that a small red badge should be worn on the left shoulder by the troops, and, as I was chief quartermaster, ordered me to purchase a large quantity of red flannel and to distribute it to each regiment.

"During the battle of Bull Run it was plain to be seen that the Federal soldiers wore a similar red badge. General Johnston and General Beauregard met at Fairfax Court House in the latter part of August or early September, and determined to have a battle flag for every regiment or detached command.

Johnston's Flag

"General Johnston's flag was in the shape of an ellipse—a red flag with blue St. Andrew's cross and stars on the cross (white) to represent the different Southern States. (No white border of any kind was attached to the cross.) General Beauregard's was a rectangle, red, with blue St. Andrew's cross and white stars, similar to General Johnston's.

"After we had discussed fully the two styles, taking into consideration the cost of material and the ease of making the same, it was decided the elliptical flag would be harder to make; that it would take more cloth; it could not be seen so plainly at a distance; that the rectangular flag, drawn by and suggested by General Beauregard, should be adopted. General Johnston yielded at once.

"No one else was present but we three. No one knew about this flag but we three until an order was issued adopting the Beauregard flag, as it was called, and directing me, as chief quartermaster, to have the flag made as soon as it could be done. I immediately issued an order to give me their red and blue silk dresses and to send them to Captain Colin McRae Selph, quartermaster, Richmond, Va. (Captain Selph is now living in New Orleans), where he was assisted by two elegant young ladies, the Misses Carey

FINDS A RELIC OF INDIAN DAYS

Compass Which Belonged to Surveyors Murdered by Cheyenne Indians

Joseph Innis, surveyor of Woodward county, has found the compass that belonged to a party of United States surveyors massacred by Cheyenne Indians on the Cimarron river, near the north line of Woodward county, in March, 1873.

March 19, 1873, the surveyors were warned by Indians not to move south of the river. Edward Haight, believing that the Indians were promising to go on the warpath, returned to Arkansas City, where he was met by citizens who commended his bravery. Haight said that the men he had left behind never would return alive.

Edward Demming, Robert Pool, C. B. Willard, Charles Davis and Thomas Short were just finishing a day's survey, ten miles south of the Kansas State line when Demming told one of his companions to go to camp, which was near Fort Supply, and tell the cook to prepare supper.

Demming said he would follow as soon as about fifty chains had been run. The man refused to go without an escort as he feared the Indians, who had been following the surveyors all day. C. B. Willard volunteered to make the trip, and by doing so saved his life.

Demming and his companions failed to reach camp and the next morning Willard and two friends began searching for them. Upon reaching the vicinity where the surveyors had been at work the body of Demming was found, scalped and bearing several bullet wounds. Pool, Davis and Short had been killed close by, but had not been scalped.

While Willard was crouching for the bodies the trampling of horses was heard, and looking across the river he saw a band of Indians on a high bluff. They were riding rapidly to a crossing about a mile distant to attack Willard and his companions. The white men sought refuge in canyons and caves and escaped to the camp near Fort Supply. They continued to Arkansas City, where the Government contractor, E. L. Darling, organized a party that went with an escort of soldiers and buried the bodies of the dead surveyors.—Kansas City Times.

Girl's Battle Flags

"The Misses Carey made the battleflags for General Beauregard and General Johnston. I think, for General J. E. Johnston. They made General Beauregard's out of their own silk dresses. This flag, La., with a statement of that fact from General Beauregard. General Van Dorn's flag was made of heavier material but very pretty.

"The statement going around that this flag was designed by Federal prisoners is false.

"General Beauregard's battleflag is in Memorial Hall at New Orleans. La. The Washington artillery battle flag can be seen at the Washington artillery hall."

Professor Crampton the Great Naturalist Is Now Touring in the South Seas

NEW YORK, June 5.—Professor Henry E. Crampton, curator of invertebrate zoology of the American Museum of Natural History, left New York yesterday bound on an expedition to the South Seas for the purpose of continuing his studies on the variation and distribution of snails, a work which he began in 1906 for the museum and continued in 1907 and 1908 under a grant from the Carnegie Institution. Professor Crampton will be away for eight months and will devote most of his time to the Society Islands, Cook Island and the North Island of New Zealand, Samoa and Hawaii.

His present journey is the fourth undertaken to the South Seas, the first of which was conducted under the auspices of the Carnegie Institution of Washington. On former journeys Tahiti and other smaller islands of the Society group were thoroughly explored and more than 170 valleys of different islands were investigated.

Visit Society Islands

The particular object of the research is terrestrial snails that live upon the vegetation in the moist jungles of the upper valley regions.

While on the forthcoming journey Professor Crampton will revisit the Society Islands for the purpose of verifying important observations. He will then visit Cook Island on the way to New Zealand. Afterward he will go through the Tonga Islands to the Samoan group, where explorations will be made for two or three months. Returning by way of Fiji, Professor Crampton will visit Honolulu, where he expects to take the field with some of the officers of the Bishop Museum and where studies will be made of the famous collections in the Bishop Museum made by Garrett.

Live specimens will be brought home for experimental study here and at the Carnegie Institution station in the Tonga Islands. Professor Crampton will make ethnological studies in these several groups, paying particular attention to traditions that soon will be lost by the

MANY PRIESTS TO VISIT IN ROME

Golden Jubilee of the North American College Celebrated June 15

NEW YORK, June 5.—The Papal Legate, Mgr. Falconio, Archbishop Farley, Bishop McDonnell and other prelates and priests have sailed to attend the golden jubilee of the North American College in Rome and the silver jubilee of its alumni association, which will open on June 15 in the college building in Rome. There are about 350 graduates of the North American College in the ministry in the States, and of these about eighty will sail on the Campania. They will be accompanied by other clergymen not graduates of the American College and by men and women of the laity.

Close With Banquet

The jubilee exercise, beginning with a solemn ceremony, will close with a banquet, which will be attended by all of the Ambassadors accredited to the Vatican, the heads of the several colleges in Rome, Roman prelates and others of the Papal court.

For some months several of the alumni of the college have been compiling data for the incorporation in a history of the North American College. This work has been completed and copies of the book, which is illustrated, are to be given as souvenirs of the golden jubilee exercises. One illuminated copy is to be presented to the Pope, and at the same audience the Pontiff is to receive a purse of gold and an engraved address printed in Latin. The visiting Americans are to have a private audience with the Pope.

He is also taking for the department of anthropology a phonograph and blank records in order to obtain records of native songs and chants.

TUBERCULOSIS IS GAINING, HE SAYS

Nathan Straus Says Great White Plague Increased 33 Per Cent in New York

WASHINGTON, June 5.—That the vigorous campaign waged against tuberculosis has failed to check the great white plague was the statement made recently by Nathan Straus, the New York philanthropist, in a letter read at the fifth annual meeting of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis.

Mr. Straus backed his assertion by official statistics from the New York Health Department, showing an increase of 33 per cent in two years in cases of tuberculosis in the city that Dr. Koch described as leading the whole world in the fight against the disease.

The reason for this failure to make headway, Mr. Straus declared, was the neglect of the mischievous wrought by the tuberculous dairy cow. Citing the results of scientific investigation and his own eighteen years' experience in saving lives, he summed up by saying that the abolition of tuberculosis will begin when it is made a crime to eat raw milk unless it comes from tuberculin-free cows or has been properly pasteurized.

Horner Folks, vice president of the association, who presided, read a paper in which he stated that an average of 153,000 persons die in the United States each year of tuberculosis, and deplored the lack of hospital facilities to care for this great army of invalids. The beds available for all classes of tuberculosis, inpatient as well as advanced, number only 15,000.

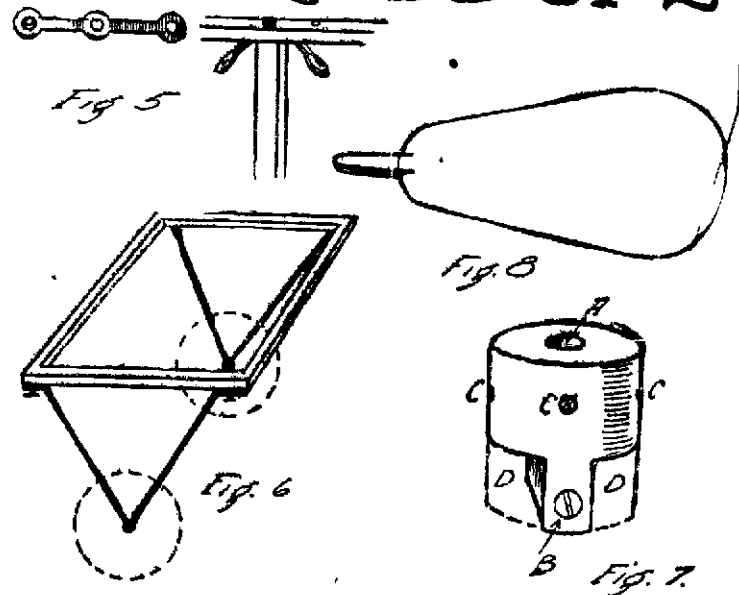

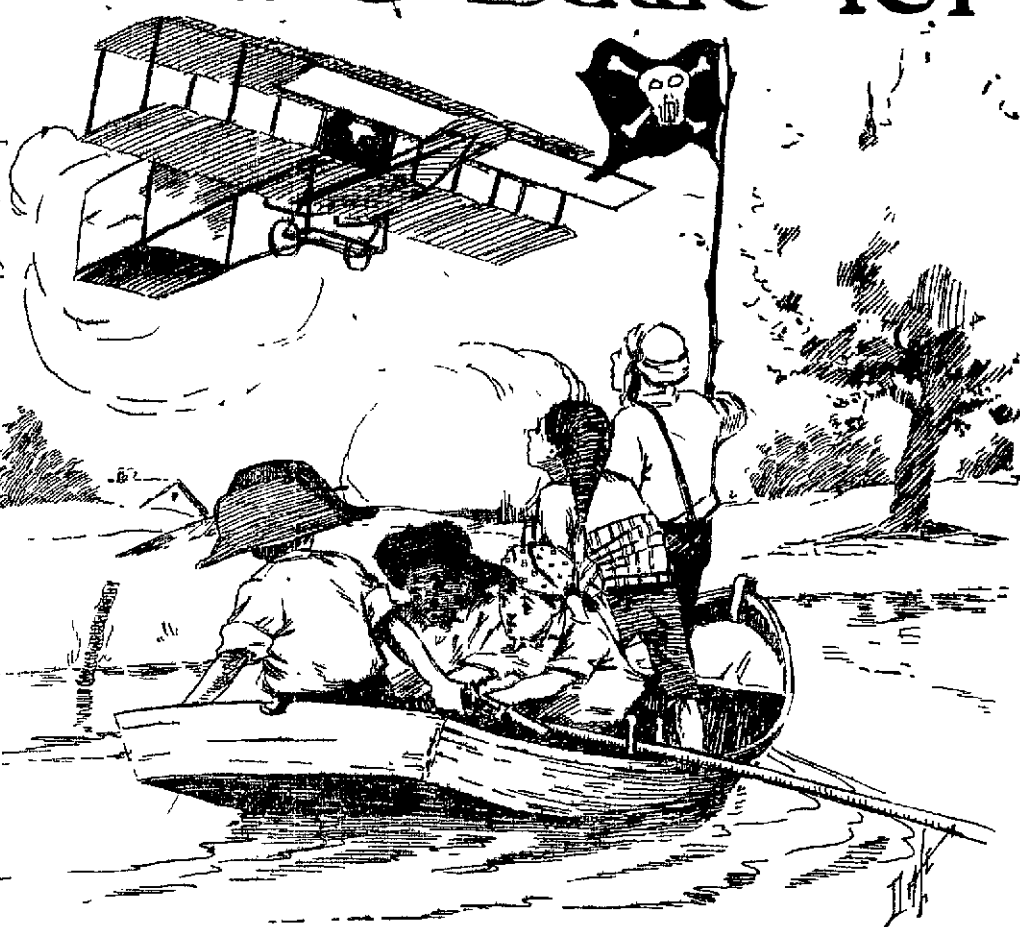

"I thought you said this was a problem to play."

"Yes. So it is."

"But it's perfectly decent."

"I know. The problem is, how does it happen to draw so well?"

Procure a piece of brass 1/2 in. long, 1/4 in. wide and 1/16 in. thick and drill a hole the size of the spindle in the middle of one end. Then cut the brass into four equal parts. Bore four holes C equidistant from one end of the spindle in the middle of each blade. Then cut the blades from the spindle and reduce the weight by filing away the ends of the blades. (Fig. 8.)
Slide this on the spindle and fix very tightly with the nut screw B. Then cut four pieces of wood—ash is best—three inch long, 1/2 inch wide and 1/4 inch thick at the ends. Then cut the ends of the blades into a penknife or fretsaw cut either with or without a file. (Fig. 8.)
Slide the blades on the holes C leaving them at an angle to the spindle of course. The blades being set at the same pitch Turn them in the same direction.

Followed by the companion, who was garbed in beggar's tatters like himself, the newly selected monarch led Queen Oberla to the table. To the disgust of the noble folk, the beggar attendant was placed on the right of the king.

All marvelled at the rapidity with which the beggars devoured pasties and meats spread before them.

"Hugo," murmured the old lord to himself, "Is a strange name for a beggar."

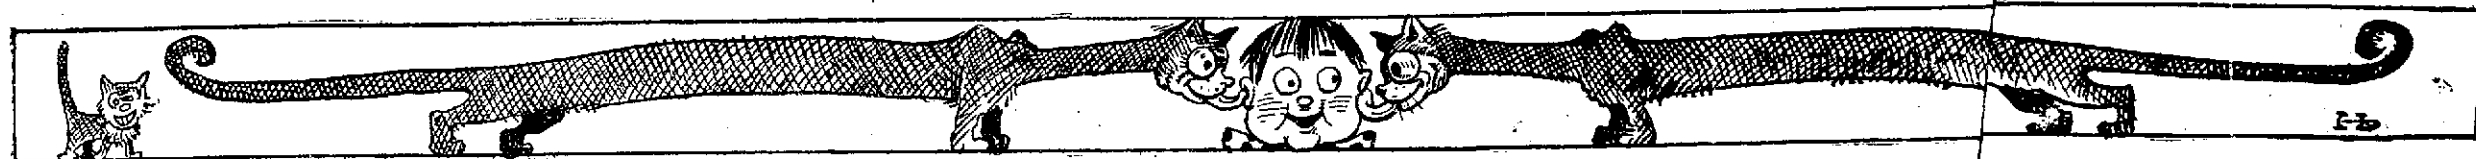

So the day went merrily on, obedient to the will of Obertha and the king, until at last nightfall came. "The time is here," said the lord, "when the king must again be beggar."

Then the tall stranger laughed. "The king will not be beggar," cried he, "but emperor!"

SIX BALLOONS START ALOFT IN GREAT RACE

Four Are Still Visible in Sky Long After Night Has Fallen

BRIDE BIDS AERONAUT HUSBAND FAREWELL

I Hope You Won't Be Back for a Long Time, She Declares

ZANESVILLE, O., June 5.—A dispatch from Dillon's Falls, eight miles from this city, says four balloons were visible there at 9:30 o'clock. They came from the west and turned to the southwest.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 5.—Under almost a cloudless sky and in a variable ground breeze that settled in the afternoon more or less into a ten-mile an hour blow toward the south, Indianapolis this afternoon made her debut as a national race center.

Tonight six great racing balloons the New York, St. Louis, University City, Cleveland, Boston and Indiana, which tugged at their anchorages of sandbags all day, slowly filling under perfect climatic conditions, are sailing through the heavens to the southwest, each trying for the honor of the national championship and the trophy of the Indiana Aero Club.

Robert H. Tindall and one hundred members of Battery A, and Sergeant Charles E. Egan and a squad of twenty-nine policemen guarded the balloons.

Officials Arrive

A. H. Hawley, the New York banker and vice president of the Aero Club of America, who has been placed in charge of the Indianapolis races, arrived at the grounds at noon. With him were Charles J. Giddon of Boston, well-known in aero circles, and who was selected as official timekeeper, and Carl Fisher, promoter of the meet.

Major F. B. Hersey, the Government Weather Bureau representative, who attended the races, received his special report from Tindall, who placed in charge of the Indianapolis races, arrived at the grounds at noon. With him were Charles J. Giddon of Boston, well-known in aero circles, and who was selected as official timekeeper, and Carl Fisher, promoter of the meet.

Start Skyward

The Great National race started at 5 o'clock, according to the program. The greenish-yellow New York with A. H. Forbes of New York as pilot and Captain C. E. Harmon of New York as assistant, was the first to go. The pearl-white Indianapolis, with Carl Fisher and Captain G. L. Bunker, was started five minutes later. The white St. Louis III, with A. H. Lambert of St. Louis as pilot and H. Honeywell of St. Louis as assistant, got a good start at 5:10 o'clock.

Five minutes after the St. Louis III was out of the way the golden Cleveland, out from the same piece as the United States, which won the great international race in Paris three years ago, was started with A. N. Morgan of Cleveland as pilot and J. H. Wade, Jr., of Chicago as assistant.

Preceding the national event three balloons sailed at 3:45 p. m. in the hand-off event. The Ohio, Dr. H. W. Thompson, Salem, Ohio pilot, Dr. J. H. Blank, aide, and the Indianapolis, Dr. C. G. Lind, pilot, and J. R. Irwin, aide, the Chicago, C. A. Coey and aide of Chicago.

Applaud Flag

Coey, when the Chicago was 400 feet over the grandstand, waved an immense farewell with a beautiful American flag. The applause that responded to the farewell was the greatest of the day.

Send Message

The Indianapolis descended at Trefler, Ind., but went back up again. The Chicago was heard from at 7:45 p. m. in the following message from Burgessville, Ind.: "We are sailing over Burgessville, Ind., time 5:30 p. m. date June 5. We are having a very hot and dry day. The race is being watched and the distance record is being made. All the balloons in the national event were provisioned for a trip of several days and were prepared for most any kind of a landing place."

Is Miss Farrar Wife, Fiancee or Neither?

MISS G. FARRAR

NEW YORK, June 5.—What is the truth regarding the engagement of marriage of Miss Farrar and Signor Antonio Scotti?

Within the last twenty-four hours three entirely different stories from three different sources have appeared.

In New York today it was positively stated that the marriage had taken place on May 10, prior to the departure of the singers for Europe.

In London the parents of Miss Farrar announced that the wedding would take place shortly in Paris.

Also in London Signor Scotti denied the engagement, and said:

"It is one of those German jokes."

LABOR LEADERS UNEARTH PLOT

Alleged Business Agent Entered Into a Pact With the Citizens' Alliance

Both the Building Trades Council and the Central Labor Council, representing organized labor in Alameda county, are greatly agitated by what they deem a discovery of a plot to deliver the secrets of the organizations into the hands of the Citizens' Alliance.

C. W. Poole, business agent of Stationary and Hoisting Engineers' Union No. 67, and a trustee of the executive committee of the Building Trades Council, is the person alleged to have entered into a pact with the Citizens' Alliance, and his acts of the last few months are now being rigidly investigated with a view of dealing out summary punishment to him in case he is found guilty.

The charges against Poole, according to the union men, are the result of a suspicion entertained by the labor leaders for several months. A watch was put upon Poole and it was discovered, say the union men, that Poole was in conference with the leaders of the Citizens' Alliance and was conducting himself in a manner totally repugnant to the cause of union labor.

Attempt Secrecy

Those in possession of the fact have sought to preserve great secrecy, but the sensational nature of what was occurring reaching the public. Labor leaders among themselves are freely discussing the alleged pact between Poole and the Citizens' Alliance. The fact in the case was presented to the executive committee on Friday evening last. The plot was deemed sufficiently strong against the accused union man that he was deposed from his position on the committee and directed to appear to face written charges now in the course of preparation.

'MRS. EDDY DEAD OR HELPLESS PUPPET'

Christian Science Church Ruled By Trickery, Says Mrs. Della M. Gilbert

OPEN LETTER SENT TO FAITHFUL AT LARGE

Startling Revelations Are Promised Baring Inside Workings at Brookline

NEW YORK, June 6.—The World this morning prints the following, proclaiming Mary Baker Eddy to be "either dead or a helpless, mindless puppet," and charging the managers of the Mother Church with falsehood, trickery and fraud. Mrs. Della M. Gilbert in an open letter to all Christian Scientists asks their co-operation in a campaign of exposure and purification.

Mrs. Gilbert holds a foremost position among the Christian Scientists of this city and is believed to be the mouthpiece of an influential element pledged to her support. Her open letter, issued to the press of the country last night, reads:

"New York, June 5, 1909. To all Christian Scientists:

"The Christian Science Church is without a spiritual leader in the flesh.

"Those in control of the Mother Church in Boston and of that house of mystery in London—the falsely so-called home of a living and dying Mary Baker Eddy—cannot successfully refute this assertion.

"Mrs. Eddy is either dead or a helpless, mindless puppet in the hands of conscienceless men.

"Not Acting Hastily"

"This truth has been revealed to me and in humble obedience to the will of God I now openly declare the facts. In this message I appeal to all honest Christian Scientists to co-operate with me for a purification of our church. I am not writing rashly or acting hastily. Within the last three weeks I have been within the so-called home of Mrs. Eddy and have studied at close range the fraud, the trickery and the revolting mystery by which the Boston organization seeks to perpetuate the pernicious fiction of an immortal and unchangeable leader.

"This profane mockery will continue indefinitely unless honest Christian Scientists, who worship God and not the fetish of a poor old woman's name, combine to expose and exterminate the fraud. The very life of Christian Science is involved and it is in the name of Christian Science—the faith which alone can lift humanity out of the slough of error—that I call upon you to act.

Promises Revelations

"As a preliminary I ask you to confer with me without delay either in person or by letter. To each of you I will fully reveal every fact in my possession bordering on conditions which surround the fiction of leadership maintained in Boston and Brookline.

"I will tell you just why there is no Christian Science church at the Plaza Hotel in this city, although its reputation had been practically perfected.

"I will lay before you the documentary evidence proving that this church was founded and killed by the machine at Brookline, acting in the name of Mrs. Eddy.

"I will give you every detail of my recent investigations in Boston and Brookline; of my conferences with the King's well-known liking for things; of my dealings with a man known as Mrs. Eddy's private secretary and of the pressure which has been brought upon me to keep silence.

"I will lay before you also of an appeal made to me in the parlor of a leading Boston hotel, by the chief executive of the Mother Church, who went like a woman when I refused to pledge myself to silence. There were witnesses to this interview and every word is carefully preserved.

"One Impossible Thing"

"I told that you are frightened by the King's well-known liking for things and talk with the hidden leader was all that I asked. It was then that he went. I had asked the one impossible thing.

"The time has come when Christian Science must purge itself of dishonesty. Mary Baker Eddy now lives in his-

Women Present to Grace Board Over Which Mayor Taylor Presides

FLAGS OF FRANCE AND AMERICA INTERMINGLE

Foreign Consuls and Their Wives Are Also Guests of Evening

SAN FRANCISCO, June 5.—The unqualified pleasure which the French ambassador's gracious errand has given the good people of San Francisco reached a climax tonight when M. and Madame Jusserand were banqueted at the Fairmont by the mayor and the municipal-ty.

It was made a gala affair, in all the bright colors and with all the effervescence that go to make up a social gathering in the sunny land of France. The prime, stereotyped "stag" banquet of awful and imposing men, such as are customary when great personages are welcomed to the Pacific coast—was displaced by an affair to which ladies were admitted. The result was a charming function, with parties of well-dressed folk gathered at round tables the whole length of the hotel ballroom, and the speakers at the long table, each with a member of the fair sex at his side.

Good Understanding

The red, white and blue were conspicuous everywhere. The Stars and Stripes of America were entwined with the tricolor of France behind Mayor Taylor and his distinguished guests. The whole tone of the affair was one illustrative of sisterly affection between the two republics that in their years of separate self-advancement on either side of a mighty ocean had, in the words of President Wheeler, "come to understand each other."

Mayor Taylor, of course, presided. At his right sat the French ambassador, at his left Madame Jusserand, whose smiling countenance betrayed her keen enjoyment of all that went on around her. Mrs. Taylor sat beside M. Jusserand, while Madame Jusserand had Governor Gillett as her dinner partner. Conspicuous figures at the speakers' table were Colonel William A. Simpson, U. S. A.; Chief Justice Beatty, Judge Morrow, President Wheeler, Collector Stratton

Mary Garden Blinded and Made Critically Ill by Hair Dye

MARY GARDEN.

(By VANCE THOMPSON.)

PARIS, June 5.—Mary Garden lies tonight in a dark room unable to bear the slightest rays of light. Not only are her eyes affected, but her whole nervous system is so completely disarranged that it possibly will be a long time before she appears on the stage again.

Her illness as well as the cause of it have been kept profound secrets by her intimate friends, and the managers of the opera have consistently postponed the intimation that her repeated failures to appear, when announced, have been due to anything but characteristic indisposition.

Doesn't See Friends

Twice, however, the billboards have borne the notice of her definite appearance and twice that announcement has been cancelled, so that the conventional excuse seemed too flimsy for credence when it occurred a second time within a week. What first roused suspicion was that many of Miss Garden's friends were not permitted to see her. It was not until tonight that the truth was learned.

The exact cause of Miss Garden's illness—an illness which is really so serious that it may rob the world of music of one of the most brilliant prima donnas, is as follows:

Shortly after her arrival in Paris Miss Garden for some reason took a dislike to her sandy hair, an indication of her Aberdeen origin, and stained it with a preparation. It was not peroxide, but some new mixture, warranted to give the hair a golden color, shot with gleams of red. The process was a slow one and necessitated a number of applications. This in turn brought about slow poisoning.

Chemical in Eye

Evidently the chemicals in the hair dye were of an unusually searching character, for after a few applications Miss Garden found that her optic nerves were affected.

She did not, however, attribute this to the use of the hair dye, but to some constitutional disturbance, and continued the use of the application. The result was most disastrous and tonight Miss Garden lies with bandaged eyes in a room from which every ray of light is excluded. The situation is really graver than this, for the singer's whole nervous system is affected and her attending physician do not believe the seriousness of her state.

QUEEN WILHELMINA FACES A GREAT DANGER

THE HAGUE, June 5.—Princess Juliana, the infant daughter of Queen Wilhelmina of Holland, was christened in the Lutheran Church today with simple ceremonies. The members of the royal family and the visiting Princes and Princesses occupied the front pews of the church. There were present also a number of officials, representatives of the diplomatic corps. The baptismal font was of silver, fashioned in the Gothic style.

After listening to a long sermon, the text of which was taken from the gospel according to St. Luke, Her Majesty presented the infant for baptism.

After this ceremony the choir chanted the 134th psalm. Queen Wilhelmina and the Prince Consort had a narrow escape from a serious accident. As the Queen and Prince Henry drove up to the church for the christening of the infant their carriage ran into another vehicle. A scene of confusion ensued and it took some time to disentangle the horses. Her Majesty was cool throughout the incident and afterward descended from her carriage amid the cheers of those present.

SITUATION IS CONSIDERED EXTREMELY SERIOUS

AWAIT ARRIVAL OF ITALIAN CONSUL

With Aid of Militia Sheriff and Deputies Arrest Ring-leaders

M'CLOUD, June 5.—The arrest of Frank Lavotto, Nicholas Fabiani and Joseph Bianchi, leaders of the striking Italians; the refusal of 250 American teamsters and skilled workmen employed by the company to return to work today because of the arrival of the Farley strikebreakers; the threat of the employees of the company's railroad to strike in sympathy with the rest of the workmen of the corporation, and the attempt of the strikers to compel the Italian laborers on the ranches of the McCloud River Lumber Company to quit work complicated the situation here today, which had been relieved somewhat by the consent of President John H. Quaal of the company to submit the whole matter to arbitration.

The 600 mill hands on strike agreed to accept arbitration only on condition that their leader be released and allowed to leave the camp. Reports last night showed that little had been accomplished in the way of arbitration, and indicated that the situation was acute.

Await Consul General

The military, however, surrounds the town and apparently has the situation in hand. The strikers pin their faith on the arrival of Salvatore Rocco, consul-general of Italy in California, who left San Francisco tonight with his attorney, Ambrose Ghelardi, to the scene of the conflict. The strikers seem disposed to accept whatever advice the consul-general may give, and the company is apparently ready to accept a fair adjustment of the difficulty.

Under the present situation, however, it is impossible for the company to make any attempt to open the mills and because of the dead stand of President Quaal that he would, under no conditions, submit to the demands of the strikers, the men have said they are willing to leave if the company will buy their cabins and an outfit of all the workmen who have the situation impossible situation at the moment.

When the news of the strike of the Americans was brought to Quaal he decided that the leaders of the Italians must be arrested at all hazards and the militia invested in a camp. An admiral line was thrown out and the camp of the Italians was surrounded. At the third cabin searched the three leaders were found and placed under arrest. Bianchi showed a disposition to resist, but was overpowered. A third man tried to draw a revolver, shouting that he would kill the Greek, but he was disarmed. The arrested men regard themselves as martyrs and say they will be liberated by their comrades. To prevent this the jail is strongly guarded.

Hold Meeting

Five hundred of the strikers held a meeting in front of the postoffice after the arrest of the leaders. An interpreter was sent to confer with President Quaal and while he was gone F. C. Beag and F. Cuno, supposed to be leaders of the strikers, were arrested by Sheriff Howard. He was jeered while reading the warrants.

The interpreter returned with a message that Quaal wanted to arbitrate and asked for the appointment of two men with whom he did the company's officers could confer. Until the matter of arbitration is settled no strikebreakers will be brought to McCloud.

Grave Complication

The strike of the 250 Americans, who have given their support to the Italians, is a grave complication. It was brought about by the announcement that President Quaal had ordered 500 men to join Farley's band to open the mills Monday. The teamsters who struck are said to be members of the San Francisco union and they and the skilled workmen, although dissatisfied with the company's management and the prices of necessities, chiefly object to the importation of any more strikebreakers. Then, too, the employees of the railroad company are threatening to walk out, too, and there are about 1000 of these. At this critical

Union Pacific to Enter Seattle

OMAHA, Nebraska, June 5.—"Within one month the Union Pacific railroad will be running through trains from Chicago to Seattle, Washington, via the Portland gateway," announced General Passenger Agent Lomax of the Union Pacific today. "This is the first result of the agreement between the Harriman and Hill roads," continued Lomax. "The Northern Pacific tracks will be used between Portland and Seattle but the train will be a Harriman train throughout locomotives, employees and all. It will not be a Hill train running in connection with Harriman roads, but a strictly Union Pacific train. This train will equal any train in the country in its appointments. We are now having built ten new trains for this service."

WILSON SECURES

ANOTHER TRIAL

SAN FRANCISCO, June 5.—Samuel Shortridge and C. J. Wilson appeared in Judge Dunne's court this morning as the newly retained counsel for John Walter Wilson, convicted of the murder of Harry Hoss, who died after taking the contents of a small paper of lead, which Wilson had introduced into the room through the mails to Hoss.

The two attorneys have been retained to obtain a new trial for Wilson on the ground that he had no opportunity to refute the testimony introduced at his trial by handwriting experts.

By consent the motion for a new trial will be continued next day for two weeks.

MORE GOLD EXPORTS

FOR WEEK EXPECTED

NEW YORK, June 5.—Abroad today the Paris market was firm, while Berlin was dull, although Americans were firm.

London was irregular with consols and home rails heavy. Kaffirs were buoyant, while Americans at London were largely on profit taking. Although foreign exchange here was slightly easier in tone there was confident predictions of more gold exports next week.

A WORD TO THE PUBLIC

When we commenced our great sale last Saturday the people of Oakland and vicinity responded to our announcement. Everybody was well aware of the fact that anything advertised by THE EASTERN STAR CLOAK AND SUIT HOUSE was backed up by an iron-clad guarantee. Day after day the people came, the crowd was great; the customers found what they were looking for and bought freely; and we cannot but feel some pride at the continued display of confidence shown by the people of Oakland and vicinity in our announcements, and we heartily say, "Thank you."

Still we have on hand a big stock from our OROVILLE STORE, too large for the volume of business, so we have decided to give those who have not been able to attend this great money-saving sale an opportunity to buy Ladies' High-Grade Wearing Apparel at prices never before attempted by any reliable firm in this city.

TWO MORE WEEKS OF UNPARALLELED SELLING will prevail throughout our entire store; prices that will surprise anyone who is accustomed to high-grade tailor-made garments.

Note the prices below—They are only a few of the many hundreds. A visit to this store will convince you.

and French Consul Meron. At another table sat the foreign consuls with their wives.

The dinner was good and there was an absence of restraint about it, which seemed to show that the usually thoughtful people of San Francisco had caught for the moment the insouciant spirit of the Parisians. And when coffee was served and Mayor Taylor arose to propose "The President of the French Republic," men and women all rose and with all their throats accompanied the orchestra in the time-honored "Marseillaise."

Taft's Health

M. Jusserand, of course, could not do so simple a thing as propose the health of President Taft without a touch of his native grace. "It is an honor always dear to the heart of a Frenchman," he said, with a smile and a bow that sealed his popularity right then and there. Presently Mayor Taylor got up to say something about France, and there was serious attention.

"We have had a day unique in the history of San Francisco, if not in the history of cities," said the Mayor, and responsive applause. "Nowhere, I think, is there to be found an instance of one country bestowing such an honor upon another as that which was bestowed on San Francisco this morning."

STEAMER SINKING WITH ALL ON BOARD WHEN FISH PLUGS HOLE

BOAT HITS SUBMERGED WRECK WHEN AT SEA

Sends Wireless For Aid When Pumps Fail, Then Leak Suddenly Stops

GALVESTON, Tex., June 5.—The passenger and freight steamship Concho, of the Mallory line, Captain J. Young, New York to Galveston, with seventy passengers, had a narrow escape from sinking at sea when the vessel sprang a leak and a hole ten inches wide let the water into the forward compartment.

The vessel was about 100 miles from Galveston Thursday evening when the leak, evidently caused from hitting a submerged wreck or sandy reef, was discovered. The water poured in and despite the pumps would have claimed the Concho had it not been that the porpoise or scavenger fish was caught in the hole and plugged it.

A wireless message to Galveston early Friday morning told that the pumps could not reduce the water, which was then six feet deep in the vessel. Preparations were being made to send a tender to the rescue of the Concho when another message was received that the vessel could make port and that the pumps were reducing the water which was four feet deep when the ship reached here last night. Divers this morning found the hole and the big fish wedged in it.

STRIKE SITUATION

moment their defection would be unfortunate and not tend to an early settlement. The American strikers were indeed too, at the establishing of the strikebreakers as guards over the mills of the company. The strike of the Americans was at the outstanding camps including Camp 2, about thirty miles from McCloud.

Threatened With Death

Perhaps the most exciting incident of the day was the arrest of the leaders, Dan Apostolatus, led Sheriff Howard, his deputies and Colonel Bradbury to the house in which the leaders were eating lunch and this has inflamed the strikers, who have been told of the action of the Sheriff, and are threatening him with death.

The strikers did not want to appoint any men to confer with Quail as they thought such appointment would be classed as leaders and arrested. They would leave the matter to the company, but the proper men to represent them were in jail, but Quail refused to treat with these men.

Loves Both Countries

"Although I was born in France," said Madame Jusserand in reply to my question, "and under the laws of my native land am a French citizen, my parents were Americans, therefore I have always cherished a feeling of affection for America. I love both countries."

"This being your first visit to California, do our women impress you as being different, collectively speaking, from those of the East?"

"People tell me that the women of the Golden State are different, that they have an individuality, distinctively western. This I have not had time to analyze, but I do know that, kindly and hospitable as we have ever been received in other parts of this splendid country, California's reception exceeds everything in our experience."

"What do you regard as the national characteristic of French woman?"

French Women Domestic

"My answer to that is, their domesticity. Devotion to home and children is the fundamental principle governing the typical French woman's whole life. I regret that certain French novelists have conveyed a different impression to the world at large. Family life in France is a really beautiful institution, more nearly approaching the ideal than in any other country I have visited. Another admirable characteristic is the mutual affection and affection of French children. The devotion between parents and children is mutual and lasting."

"What of the equal suffrage movement in France?"

"It has attracted little attention. It does not appeal to the average French woman, probably because she is engrossed with family affairs and the education of her children, a matter to which she gives much thought and also daily attention."

"Have you children of your own, Madame?"

The dark eyes on a level with mine lost their smile in a sudden mist. There was a pause.

"No," said Madame, very gravely, very sweetly, "unfortunately, no."

To Visit Yosemite

SAN FRANCISCO, June 5.—The French Ambassador and Madame Jusserand will leave at 11 o'clock Sunday night for the Yosemite Valley and to see the giant sequoias of the Calaveras Grove.

The Ambassador will return to San Francisco at 12 o'clock on Wednesday, and will proceed on Wednesday evening for Portland.

tory only. The fetish of her name is all that remains.

"That name, honored by all of us, has become the breastwork of falsity and fraud. I say this in deepest loyalty to the cause of Christian Science and in truest devotion to the memory of the woman through whom God revealed the truth and gave to the world the science of healing."

"But the hour is at hand for a reorganization of the faith on lines of honesty, unity and purity. There must be a living spiritual head, not a fetish manipulated by schemers working solely for financial results. Earnestly pleading for your co-operation in the important duty which now confronts every honest Christian Scientist, I am, faithfully yours,

"DELLA M. GILBERT."

Church Not Surprised

Mrs. Gilbert's proclamation will not surprise the church managers in Boston and at the home of Mrs. Eddy. She frankly notified them of her plans several days ago, serving a written notice upon Mrs. Eddy's private secretary when every effort to see the hidden leader had failed. Since that notification the leaders have held many conferences at the offices of the Christian Science and almost nightly sessions in the fortress-like dwelling at Brookline, which is known as Mrs. Eddy's home.

Like Mrs. Gilbert's declaration of war, the people of Brookline had seen little of the Eddy carriage, and it was understood that the aged founder of Christian Science had abandoned the daily ride so long an advertised fixture in the routine of her life.

But suddenly the carriage reappeared on the roads around Brookline and its sole occupant, as in the old Concord days, was a woman dimly seen through the closed windows, muffled to the eyes and screening her face behind an open parasol.

Thousands Revel in Cherry Realm of "Queen Bess"

SAN LEANDRANS OPEN WIDE THE FLOODGATES OF THEIR HOSPITALITY

Novel Entertainment Rounds Out Most Unique and Successful Carnival in History of Alameda County.

SAN LEANDRO, June 5.—The Cherry Festival at San Leandro came to a close at 12 o'clock tonight after one of the most successful series of entertainments of the kind given in this county. Indeed, it may be doubted that there was ever an entertainment of like character given in Alameda county.

Of course there have been attempts to show in a demonstrative way the richness of the cherry section of Alameda, but there never was so systematic an attempt in that direction as there was in the festival which has just come to a close. It was an undertaking of great proportions because it involved much expense and a heavy drain upon the energy and the patriotism of the residents of the place.

There was not a feature which would tend to add to the attractiveness of the festival that was overlooked. There was evidently great foresight displayed in the laying out of the plans, as there was certainly a great deal of executive ability shown in carrying of them into effect.

Throng Attends Fete

The festival opened on Friday and while there was a large attendance the first day, it was predicted that the great day would be today and this forecast proved to be correct in every particular.

There were not fewer than 24,000 persons present at the festival today and there were none of them who were not delighted. On both days the weather was delightful and there was not a moment during the carnival when anybody could not have taken part in the exercises, so happy were the breezes and warm was the atmosphere.

The distinguishing feature of the festival was the bestowal upon the patrons—free of cost—of tons of cherries—cherries which at the moment were bearing in Alameda county a price that delighted the heart of every person engaged in the cultivation of the cherry, not alone in Alameda county, but in every part of the state.

The festival has had the effect of directing in a special manner to Alameda county the attention of the people of the state, for the reason that there is no part of California that has not heard of the wonderful productivity of Alameda county and there were thousands of people who have done so.

One of the facts of the festival was the fact that the chief product of the section in the vicinity of San Leandro was dispensed by the men who had been successful in raising the fruit.

Cherries For All

The cherries were bestowed at a booth erected in a special place for the purpose at the furthest extremity of the stands on the Pacific avenue. At this place there was no part of the day but there was a crowd waiting in line for the fruit. The fruit was given to the people in the form of a cherry. The people who were in line for the fruit were given a cherry. The people who were in line for the fruit were given a cherry.

Full of Incidents

The afternoon was full of incidents which were of the largest and the most interesting. The people who were in line for the fruit were given a cherry. The people who were in line for the fruit were given a cherry.

Grand Procession

The procession was made up of three divisions, each having a band which rendered inspiring music. It moved on Court square on Pacific street and the line of march was as follows: The band of the San Leandro High School, the band of the San Leandro High School, the band of the San Leandro High School.

Prominent Men in Line

The right of the line was occupied by the band of the San Leandro High School, the band of the San Leandro High School, the band of the San Leandro High School.

Parade of Babes

After the main procession there was another one in honor of the babes, over which J. A. Holmgren presided.

Prizes Awarded At Cherry Feast

There was still another procession consisting of what was called "The Horribles," in which there were a number of grotesque characters.

BABY SHOW IS FEATURE OF FESTIVAL

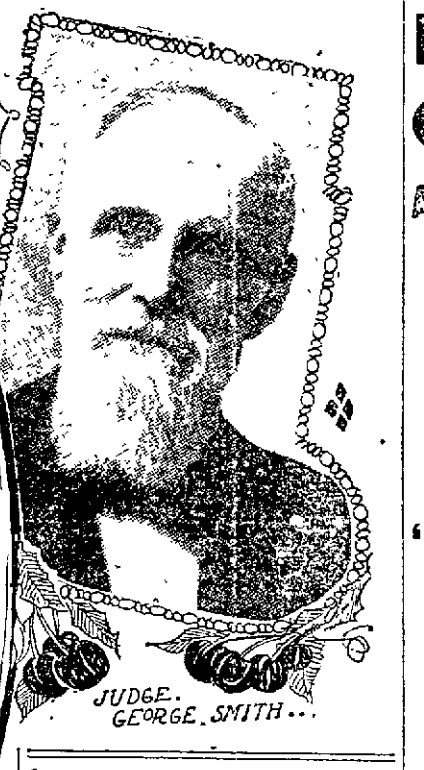

One of the most unique features of the festival was the baby parade under the supervision of J. A. Holmgren, who acted as marshal.

"Queen Bess" Is Glorious

To the entertainment committee goes a great deal of credit for the manner in which the program of the day was carried to a successful conclusion.

"TAKE OFF" ON POUND WINS PRAISE

During the street parade prizes were awarded as follows:

COTTAGE GROVE, Ore., June 5.—A passenger train consisting of an engine, tender and one car on the Oregon and Southern Railway Railroad on its return trip from Willamette and the Hohemann bridge was thrown through a bridge which spans the Roe River about five miles east of here. About fifteen persons were injured and W. H. Ostrander, the engineer, is expected to die. His head is crushed and he was in terrible pain.

The Injured.

The most seriously injured are W. H. Ostrander, engineer, crushed chest; injured timber dealer, left leg broken; Noah Forrester, cut about the head; Judge Foster, left leg broken; Leslie Wickes, face cut and bruised; Claude Kline, 8 years old, head crushed; Ed T. Ellis, traveling salesman, leg broken; Rogers, leg broken and hurt in.

The bridge is forty feet above the water and it is considered miraculous that in the mass of falling timbers no one was killed outright. The uninjured of whom there are few, did heroic work in rescuing the injured.

'Mailed Fist' of Mikado in Japan
Is Gen. Hasegawa

GENERAL HASEGAWA

The hand of the Emperor of Japan in his ruling of Korea is for the present, nominal, in which he is a great asset. Inside the glove, however, there is a fist of iron and the man who represents this is General Hasegawa, one of the most famous soldiers in his majesty's army. General Hasegawa is now fifty-nine years of age. He began his life in the army at twenty-two as a major and rose to be a colonel six years later. He was a major-general in 1886 and commanded a brigade in the Japanese army. At that time he was noted as a hero of Port Arthur and in the war with Russia he again won his spurs as the commander of the imperial guard men under General Kuroki leading to a victory at the Yalu and the battle of Liaoyang. He was made a general in 1904 and after that battle was appointed head of the army in Korea. He is now practicing law at the top of the Japanese military and should there be a war with foreign powers the probability is that he would be in command.

tests Action Brought For Thousands Given Her

SANTA ROSA, June 5.—Mrs. Sarah A. Fowler, wife of John H. Fowler, a local capitalist, has filed a motion to strike out portions of her husband's suit, begun in the Superior Court a few days ago. Fowler asked the court to order his wife to return to him thousands of dollars and some notes and mortgages which he transferred to her some weeks ago. Fowler states in his complaint that he was weak in mind and body, being seventy years of age, and relied on his wife to take care of him. He alleges that she does not intend to do so. She has a beautiful home in Fifth street and owns considerable property here and in Mendocino and San Joaquin counties. It is stated that at the time Fowler signed the agreement he was satisfied that his wife should handle his business matters.

SACRAMENTO, June 5.—Dave Sheehan, a deputy constable of Alameda county, who attempted to murder his wife about two weeks ago, will in all probability be put on probation today when he is brought before Judge Hughes to enter his plea. Constable William Allen, who was present at the trial, promised that if Sheehan were put on probation he would secure for him and his wife a home in the city. He will be brought before the court today and at that time Judge Hughes will decide whether or not he is to be paroled. The attempt to shoot his wife occurred in her apartment in the city. She was alone at the time and he shot her in the back of the head. She was badly injured and he was arrested. He is now in the city and he is now in the city.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 5.—The burst of indignation by the French colony against the utterances of President David Starr Jordan at Bryn Mawr Pa. recently in which he is quoted as saying that the French race was decadent, even to a higher degree today than at the meeting Friday evening when Ambassador Jusserand took occasion publicly to commend Professor Lucien Foulet for expressing his disapproval of Professor Jordan's remarks. At the same time leaving the platform from which Professor Jordan was speaking.

As a factor in the French colony in this city, and after declaring today that the fight now started would not stop until it was a matter of life and death, the length and breadth of this country.

For a century and a quarter we have entertained the most friendly relations with the French people. We have been at peace with them for a century and a quarter. We have been at peace with them for a century and a quarter.

Not only this but it is a time when friction might arise such statements are warranted to destroy that good harmony and understanding that has so long existed between the two races.

We have sent a telegram congratulating Professor Foulet on the trial he has given to the French people in this city. The French people in this city are not the French people in this city. The French people in this city are not the French people in this city.

for the Inter-State Motor Car has been located in Oakland under the management of Frank W. Ayers. This will be a branch of the San Francisco house and in placing the car here at this time they are following close on the heels of a victory, for this machine was one of the first to make perfect scores at San Leandro last Sunday and Monday. This entry was driven by G. C. Murray, who remained at the wheel during the entire 24 hours.

In the absence of any big races in Europe this year, a call has been issued for all of the prominent racing drivers to meet around the banquet board in Paris in the near future. Invitations have been extended to each driver who, during the past several years, has succeeded in placing his entries tenth or better in any international contest. A touch of politics will be involved in the event by the empty chairs that will be placed for the drivers who are dead. The two names recently placed on the absent list are those of Leon Sheery and M. Cedrino.

To Attend Auto Meet
A plan is on foot, among the motor enthusiasts of San Francisco, for an endurance run to Los Angeles in the early part of next month. If the details are carried out this event will be somewhat on the lines of the Glidden Tour and is timed to bring the northern tourists into the southern city for the road races scheduled for July 10.

The automobile dealers of Southern California have spared no pains or expense to make the proposed race an unequalled success. Thousands of dollars have been spent on the road and grandstands being erected that will accommodate at least 10,000 spectators. In addition to these parking spaces will be arranged around the course that will accommodate many thousands more. It is expected that fully 100,000 persons will witness this event.

When you wear the sole off your shoes you don't throw the shoes away, do you? No, of course not. You have them re-soled. Then, why throw away your automobile tire because the tread is worn?

Martland, Pearl & Elkington, Oakland agents Diamond Tires, guarantee every tire they re-tread.

Their slogan is: "When our re-treads are worn out their cost has been forgotten."

HARRIMAN DISAPPROVES OF TURBINE ENGINES

NEW YORK.—A well-defined report that the American turbines now on the Southern Pacific Steamship Co. are considered a failure and are to be displaced by those of the reciprocal type, caused naval men today to wonder as to the outcome of the tests of the turbines now on the scout-ship Salamis.

C. N. Wolfe of the Wolfe Lumber and Hardware company has just returned from an extended tour of the state in his Fullman "K" touring car. He reports a very pleasant trip.

Although the broken terminal, which cost the Mitchell runabout a clean score in the recent endurance test, was accidentally hooked off by the observer, no complaint has been made by Manager Peacock, who says it is the fortune of war and when he enters a test he takes his chances with the rest. He is satisfied with the work of this seven-passenger car that carried seven people and still came through clean.

Racing Driver Enters Business
D. A. Bonney, who has long been recognized as one of the greatest racing drivers on the Pacific Coast, has retired from that game and gone into business in Oakland. He will not, however, lose his identity among automobile men, for he has taken up the agency for the Hupmobile, a new machine in the West.

For several years Bonney has been at the wheel of the Starns entries in every contest of importance in Northern California and has made some excellent records for that car, among them being the recent hill climbing contest in San Francisco, the Mt. Tamalpais climb of a little over a year ago, when he and Frank Leard took a seven passenger car to the top of that mountain. This was the first machine ever to make the ascent and part of the trip was made over the ties of the railway for want of any other road. For the present, he will be located at the Lake Merritt Garage.

AUTO WRECKED; FOUR INJURED

Closes Open Bridge in Time to Save Party From Death in River

CHICAGO, June 5.—While the Jackson boulevard bridge was swung last night to permit the passage of a boat an automobile containing four persons crashed through the safety chain and sped on to the swinging structure.

G. S. Wegener of Oak Park who was driving the car lost control of it and at the east end of the structure it collided with a steel girder. Wegener was thrown from the automobile which swerved and ran into the north curb, throwing the other occupants to the street.

The injured were Miss Mary Quinn, H. A. Russell of Los Angeles, G. S. Wegener and Mrs. G. S. Wegener.

Saved by Bridge Tender

But for the presence of mind of G. W. Haight night bridge tender the automobile with its occupants would have gone into the river. From the bridge house where he operated the electric lever Haight saw the machine rush through the chain and from the way the machine wobbled from side to side, he knew it was beyond the control of the driver.

He stopped the swinging of the bridge and quickly turned it back to position. Had he failed to do this, the automobile must have gone into the river over the swinging structure.

W. Turton Leaves A $75,000 Estate

SACRAMENTO, June 5.—The will of William Turton, a veteran railroad contractor, was filed today in the superior court. The testament disposes of money and property amounting to $75,000. Kate and Nellie Turton, daughters of the deceased, are made executrices without bond. Mr. Turton died here March 25. He was one of the best known railroad contractors in this vicinity and was connected with the pioneer railroad work of this state.

FIRE DESTROYS DALTON'S AUTOS

County Assessor Loses Three Machines in Blaze of Mysterious Origin

Fire of mysterious origin completely destroyed the automobile garage and three automobiles owned by County Assessor Henry P. Dalton at Ninth and Pine streets shortly after 11 o'clock last night. The garage is situated in the rear of Dalton's foundry and the latter building was saved from destruction only after a hard fight by the Oakland fire department. In the garage at the time were a Limousine, a White Steamer and a Runabout. They were valued at about $9000 and were totally destroyed. Dalton was visiting friends when the fire broke out and up to a late hour last night knew nothing of the conflagration. It is not known whether the property was insured or not.

Shortly after the firemen arrived on the scene a tank of gasoline exploded with a terrific noise and several firemen narrowly escaped injury from falling timbers. The garage a frame structure was burned to the ground.

AMERICAN MASONS IN ENGLAND THANK TAFT FOR SOLICITUDE

WASHINGTON, June 4.—President Taft having sent a letter of congratulations to the American Lodge composed entirely of Americans to be instituted in England, received today the following from London in response: "President Taft, Washington—Your cablegram, instinct with national feeling and Masonic brotherly love, just read and much appreciated at the first banquet of the American lodge attended by a representative gathering of the grand officers of the Grand Lodge of England with Most Worshipful, Pro-Grand Master Lord Ampthill at their head who received your kind and cordial greetings—(Signed) Frederick C. TELLS OF GIRL FOOLED BY COUNT

Charles A. Hitchcock Gives Out Information Relative to Miss Garwood

NEW YORK, June 5.—Charles A. Hitchcock who has been the legal representative of the Garwood family for a number of years, today gave out the first information from this side concerning the sisters, Isabella and Frances Garwood.

"Miss Frances Garwood has been in New York," he said, "but I cannot just say where she is now. I saw her about two months ago. When she comes to town she generally stops at an up-town hotel."

"I have received no word officially from Miss Isabella Garwood although I am expecting some message soon. Both sisters have traveled extensively since their mother's death. There is another sister married, in Chicago but I do not care to give her name or address."

It was Mr. Hitchcock who took charge of selling the Garwood home 32 West

Eighty-seventh street and pending the disposal of the old home he was frequently consulted by Miss Isabella Garwood, oldest of the sisters.

Friends of Miss Isabella declared today that she was a girl with a very keen insight into business affairs and practically took charge of the settlement of her father's estate. A number of business men in the vicinity of the Garwood home, who had dealings with Miss Isabella, expressed great wonderment that she should be so easily fooled by the "count" Bettini di Moise.

It is said the fortune of the Garwood family came from Charles Garwood of the old time theatrical firm of Brady and Garwood who operated a chain of theaters in the middle west, with headquarters at Detroit.

REFUSES TO REDUCE FURNITURE MAN'S BAIL

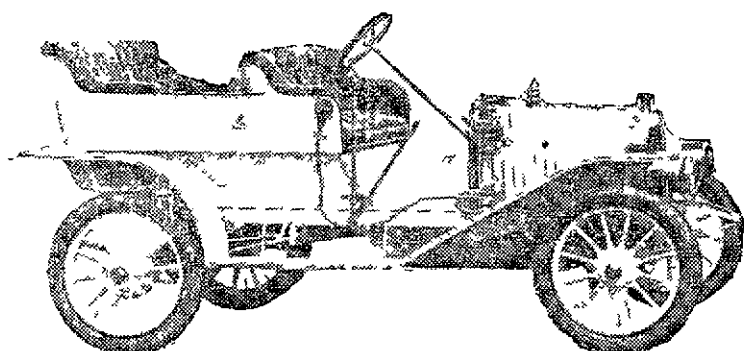

SAN FRANCISCO, June 5.—Emory C. Brice, former president of the Brice Antiques Furniture company, now bankrupt, must remain in the county jail. Judge Dineen refusing today to reduce his bail which has been fixed at $10,000 pending an inquiry into the sudden disappearance of George W. Vredenburg, a New York furniture man by the grand jury. Mr. Vredenburg was presenting witnesses against Brice and when the case was called for trial several days ago Vredenburg was not present although the district attorney's office claimed that he had been in San Francisco the day before and had been arrested.

26,836 at Work On Panama Canal

WASHINGTON, June 5.—Employees actually at work in building the Panama canal now number 26,836, as shown by the report of the chief quartermaster for the month of April. Of this number, 4,320 are gold employees and the remainder are on two silver or labor roll. The Panama railroad force numbers 59,000 and the canal commissary force 750. Thus the total number at work both on the canal and railroad is shown to be 85,986. The report states that 20,000 men from Barbadoes were imported during the month and of them being assigned to the railroad for work on the 10,000 line and 250 on the new construction divisions of the canal work.

How Mayor Taylor Got Mixed Up With Drums
at Bohemian Club

SAN FRANCISCO, June 5.—Was it a deliberate insult to our fine old Insane Mayor Taylor? Was it a put-up job or a ludicrous mistake?

It occurred at the big Bohemian Club banquet to Raphael Weill, Consul Merou of France was there, and so were about 250 more or less distinguished citizens. A company of singers were dressed as Napoleon's "Old Guard," Raphael Weill being one of the so-called "Old Guard" of the club and sharing a splendid patriotism between his native France and his adopted America.

The Mayor was on his feet, his poetic tongue in a fine frenzy rolling. "Raphael Weill is one of the stoutest of the Old Guard," he shouted.

"Ter-rump! Ter-rump! Ter-rump!" broke in the roll of a drum, drowning the Mayor.

In marched the dressed up Old Guard, the drummer at their head and loudly chanted in several surprising notes: "Rue de Lis, c'est immortal 'Marseillaise.'" The Mayor was completely squelched. He could go no further.

"It's a shame!" said some.

"Those d—d hoodlums!" said others.

"It's a put-up job by the enemies of the prosecution," cried one clique.

"Why, it's part of the programme," insisted Mackenzie Graham, one of the singers of the "Old Guard." "The Mayor was in on it all."

Apparently the man of song really thought it was their cue to come in, but the Mayor was badly rattled, and his friends are still crying "Shame!" But as near as can be gathered by an outsider the incident came about in this way.

The singers were told that their cue was to be the words, "The Old Guard." They were not told that President Harry McLean was to spring the cue. So when they heard the Mayor shout in oratorical ecstasy, "The Old Guard," they thought it was their cue and came marching on to sound of drum, declaring "the day, the hour of glory is at hand." So instead of an insult it probably was all a ludicrous blunder. But isn't it to laugh?

The Mayor has also had a lot of trouble with the forthcoming banquet to Ambassador and Madam Jussier. The invitations were sent out for a dinner at $10 a plate. But the acceptance sent back to Secretary McKinnay, who was managing the affair for the Mayor, were so few and far between that the thing began to look like a decided fiasco. Surely it would never do to have the French Ambassador meagrely entertained in the city to which he had come to present the medal of France.

So the cost of the feed was cut in twain. Instead of $10 a plate the price was made $5 a plate. The excuse was made that this price was "more Democratic," the banquet being to the representative of a great Republic and not the servant of a king. But it might have been remembered that the true Bryan Democracy feasts at $100 banquets, and that $500 a plate is far beyond the untried and out of the reach of the great unwashed.

However, this was not all. The foreign consuls were invited, as of course. But they were not invited as guests of honor. Each received the card asking him to put up $20.00 a plate and enclose his check to McKinnay. This is considered a dreadful breach of official etiquette, as the consuls always expect to be free feeders at official banquets. So there has been murmuring long and loud, and the Mayor's cup of joy does not run over.

Attorney-General U. S. Webb has taken one more step in his campaign for the nomination for Governor on the Republican ticket. He has won the cribbage tournament of the Union League Club. That club has expressed a willingness to back the Attorney-General against all comers in a cribbage match. Such a contest could offer rare sport.

But now to catch the German vote, General Webb should become the pinocle champion. The Irish could be won over by a championship at forty-fives; the French with ecarte; the Spanish with parasso; the Russians with zyxeloph, and so on down the line. When it comes to capturing the American vote—ah, that way danger lies. The championship at poker has wrecked many a home, depleted many a fortune, exploded many a balloon ambition.

The queen of our coming Portola festival has been doing the Hotel del Monte. As she is a dashing young woman, with more brains than the average, and a love for pleasuring, she has attracted much attention. The high position to which she has been elected has caused the eye of admiration to fall upon her. But, alas, it has also attracted the glance of envy.

And now the mean things who were not selected as queen of the carnival are saying—oh, dreadful—that her complexion is not all her own; and, worse and more of it—that her ankles are too large. But the lady goes her stately way, careless of these sneers of envy, heedless of the words of sour detraction. There is no knocker so mean as the female knocker—particularly a disappointed one.

In the East an effort is being made to set up a statue to Richard Mansfield, who boasted that he was the only American actor who had not been made famous through the medium of a five-cent cigar. Apparently there is some difficulty in getting the money together, and an appeal has been sent to former President Jack Shiels of the Bohemian Club, asking him to help out.

But there is no enthusiasm among the men appealed to. It is difficult to get up a committee to take the matter in charge. For the fact is, Mansfield was not loved here—or anywhere, so far as I can learn. Though admittedly a great actor he was one of the most disagreeable of men. His antics behind the scenes at times suggested insanity, and off the stage it was hard for him to treat ordinary humans with ordinary courtesy. So San Francisco's contribution to his monument is not likely to be a large one.

The story of the tramp who got full on "near beer" in your near temperance town of Berkeley has caused a lot of laughter among the quidnuncs. Former brewers like Henry Fortmann laugh loudest of all. For that "near beer" is an ancient jest of the brewers, and they really will have to spoil the beautiful psychological study of the man whose imagination made him drunker'n a billed owl.

They work that near beer down at San Jose to a carnival queen's taste. Out at Alum Rock park there is one of the fool puritanical rules about serving beer to guests. Recently some San Franciscans went there. The day was warm. They tramped hard. They thought of the cooling beer at the park.

"Bring us two quarts of beer," said one thirsty chap.

"We can't serve beer," declared the waiter.

"What? Can't serve beer?"

"It's against the law; but I can bring you some temperance beer."

"What sort of stuff is that?"

"Well, it's like beer—looks like it; tastes like it."

"Oh, well; bring it along if we can't get the real stuff."

On came the bottles labeled "Temperance Beer—Non Intoxicant." The stuff poured like beer. It looked like beer. It did taste just like beer. And it gave a mild little exhilaration—like beer.

And, by the jumpy yimminy, it was beer! The local brewery put it up with the temperance label, and it sold like hot-cakes to the temperance cranks. And I'll wager you'll find your Berkeley "near beer" about the same sort of a brew.

"All this talk of hard times and the likelihood of failure among the merchants is all rot," said Charles Foster, of Shreve & Co., in discussing the groans and wailings of a lot of kickers.

"How is your business getting on?"

"We are doing the best business we ever did in the history of our house. Our only trouble is we can't get skilled artisans to keep up with the demand. At the present time we have a commissioner in the East scouring around for handicraftsmen who can do the sort of work we require. But apart from the scarcity of skilled labor, we haven't a word of complaint. Business could hardly be better."

And so it goes with all the big firms. Yet our merchants have not been blameless in the matter of the recent fool stories affecting their credit. They have pulled poor mouths so long—or, at least some of them have—that idle gossips began to take them at their words.

That call-down for David Starr Jordan at Bryn Mawr seems to have given pleasure to a lot of people, and particularly to some of the Stanford trustees, who regard him as a burden and a bunk. He has caused more trouble than the trustees can smooth out, and they wonder where his efficiency comes in. The remark of former President Elliott of Harvard is recalled. That venerated educator was asked:

"What do you think of Jordan as the executive head of a university?"

"Ah-um-ah," hesitated the old man. "Well, Dr. Jordan is quite a scientist."

"I guess he knows about fish," ventured one of the trustees.

"I know he doesn't," at once declared Captain Mosher, formerly of the Albatross, the fish boat of the Federal government. "He may know some things, but I can take my oath he doesn't know anything about fish."

There are some blessings that come in a strange disguise. Out at the county jail Abe Ruef never was or looked better in his life. The enforced rest has done him a world of good. He is popular with the other prisoners, who are the recipients of many favors from him, and he could easily be elected governor of the place if the prisoners had the franchise in the matter. But the impression seems to be that he is to be the attorney in all the graft prosecution business.

A tip is out that the Sutro will contest that has hung on in the Supreme Court so long is to be decided in a very few days. The tip also goes that the trust clause in the will is to be upset. If this be true it will start lots of things to moving.

How much longer will Rudolph Spreckels be permitted to control the editorial policy of the Call? This question has been agitating newspaper circles ever since it was authoritatively announced that the will of Claus Spreckels would be contested by his two elder sons.

The Call is the property of John D. Spreckels, the oldest of the Spreckels children, who was left no inheritance in the will of his father, but for the last three years its policy has been dominated and directed by Rudolph, who supplanted his elder brother in the affections and last testament of the Sugar King. Although the brothers are now at war over the estate of their father, the Call is still the organ of Rudolph, the megaphone of his exploits and virtues. That it should continue to be the voice of Jacob, although the hand of Esau, excites no little surprise.

The Call was an enormous factor in bringing Rudolph from his obscurity and lifting him to his present pinnacle of despotic power is conceded. When he returned from Hawaii and fixed his residence in San Francisco he was little known and not at all liked. His long litigation with his parents and older brothers had estranged him from all his family kin save his brother Gus. His capital was what he had made with the money given (or loaned him) by his father, and which caused a bitter family feud and some exciting scenes in court. Rudolph had never participated in politics and was without political influence; indeed, he testified that the vote he cast for Mayor Taylor was the first time he had voted in thirteen years.

Notwithstanding their past differences, John D. Spreckels allowed the Call to take Rudolph up and boost him along. The paper kept him before the public, and when Rudolph and Phelan became involved in a quarrel with Patrick Calhoun over street railway matters, the Call sided with him and held him up to view as a public-spirited citizen fighting a greedy corporation in the interests of the city.

It was through this that Rudolph became reconciled to his father, now old and feeble, and managed to creep closer into his good graces than any of his sons. John D., immersed in his business affairs and spending most of his time in San Diego, woke up one day to find himself supplanted by Rudolph as the business representative of the old man; that the younger son Claus Spreckels had stigmatized as an ingrate and a despoiler of his parents was now become the pride and best beloved of a doting and enfeebled father.

By making Rudolph a popular hero the Call had made him the idol of his father. The old man revoked the power of attorney held for many years by John D. and executed a new one in favor of Rudolph, who now wielded the power of the vast millions accumulated by the elder Spreckels.

Still the Call continued to be the voice of Rudolph, the trumpet of his fame, the scourge of his enemies.

Eight hours after the Sugar King passed away his will was filed. It was a will made after the old man became reconciled to the son he was wont to call an ingrate. By that will John D. and Adolph, the older sons who had always stood loyally by the old man, were disinherited, the whole of the vast estate being devised to Rudolph and Gus and Mrs. Watson, the married daughter. Gus was arrayed with Rudolph in his legal war against his father and elder brothers.

Still the Call is the mouthpiece of Rudolph Spreckels. It looked for awhile as if Esau was content to be the servant of the younger brother who had usurped his birthright, but at last John D. and Adolph have begun legal proceedings to invalidate the will. Hence the curiosity that attaches to the Call's course. How much longer will it reflect the purposes of Rudolph, its real owner apparently having little to say about the paper's editorial policy?

Little Italy is up in arms against Mayor Taylor. All on account of the failure of our poetical chief magistrate to appoint an Italian to succeed Dr. Giannini after promising to do so and inviting the leading Italian citizens to confer with him as to which of them should be honored with a seat in the Board of Supervisors.

It was all very funny. The Mayor was busy as a bee discussing the qualifications of various candidates of Italian birth or ancestry. He took no other under consideration, none but an Italian would do. Garlic and Eloquence held the floor in the Mayor's office without contest for a considerable space.

Then something happened. The Mayor got his orders. The graft prosecution wanted to pay a debt of honor it owed to W. W. Sanderson, who appeared as a witness against Patrick Calhoun, and the Mayor was called on to cancel the obligation. Sanderson got the job.

Hence the Latin colony is a raging sea of wrath and discontent. Telegraph Hill and the Barbary Coast have declared a vendetta against the deceitful Mayor.

The naming of a public school Portola in honor of the discoverer of San Francisco bay has provoked a protest and discussion, likewise some enlightenment regarding the slang of the Mediterranean.

Among the Italian fishermen Portola has a significance, that cannot be mentioned in polite society. It is not a term of honor, to say the least, and it refers to something altogether different than the bold Spanish explorer, whose coming here is about to be celebrated with so much eclat. Its meaning has been circulated among the children of some of the schools, and the knowledge cannot be said to be edifying to the youthful mind.

Along the boulevards, however, it is said that this slang meaning should be an inspiration to the poetic fancy of the Mayor, even if it is about the last suggestion in an educational way.

The Calloun trial has revealed a shrewd trick that William J. Burns played on Abe Ruef, a trick that probably insured the conviction of the curly boss. Whether it was a commendable trick depends upon the point of view.

In the cross-examination of Raymond Burns it developed that the name Heney on the Spreckels' payroll is fictitious. The real name of the party figuring on the payroll as "Heney" is Wilbur. Now Wilbur, although one of the Burns detective corps, acted as the confidential agent of Ruef in looking up the associations and antecedents of the venemen summoned to serve as jurors in his trial. He reported on these men to both Burns and Ruef; he conferred with Ruef and his attorneys as to whom it was desirable to keep on the panel and whom it was desirable to get off. He participated in all the discussions relative to what jurors should be challenged.

And he promptly reported everything he heard to Burns. He purposely deceived Ruef and his attorneys regarding the sentiments entertained by venemen, and to this triumph of justice he took Ruef's pay while betraying him.

While he was doing all this he was in the pay of Rudolph Spreckels. He took service with Ruef by direction of Burns, who evidently regards this sort of thing as perfectly legitimate—when done by himself. It is base and criminal, however, if done by others.

"Heney" Wilbur is evidently a good match for "Mike Flynn" Helms. But I must say that justice is suffering in reputation by her association with these worthies.

The indications that the Good Government League will have some difficulty in getting on the official ballot at the general election next November are becoming more pronounced. I have been told that the Election Commissioners will not place this political hybrid on the ballot unless ordered to do so by the courts. It is understood to be the opinion of the Commissioners, subject, of course, to judicial action, that the direct primary eliminated all methods of nomination other than the primary of that character. If the board is sustained in this position the Good Government League and other organizations of similar character will be unable to go on the official ballot by petition next November.

The friends and supporters of Frank J. Sullivan, the brother-in-law of James D. Phelan, and who is a candidate for Mayor, subject to a nomination by the Union Labor party, predict that he will knock the persimmon and defeat P. H. McCarthy at the August primary. McCarthy's supporters scout this suggestion and point to the ability of the president of the Building Trades Council as an organizer and declare that union labor will be for McCarthy almost to a man.

Sullivan is making preparation for the contest at the primary polls and aims to have an organization working in his interest in every voting precinct before August 17th. The indications are that Sullivan will be quite strong in some of the Assembly districts and he may prove no mean antagonist before the present political scrimmage is concluded.

There has been talk in labor circles of George Tracy, president of the Typographical Union, making a fight for the nomination for Mayor against McCarthy. The friends of Tracy claim that when the latter was running for Congress against E. A. Hayes, in the Fifth district last year, McCarthy and his associates knifed him. Whether Tracy will seek political reprisals by becoming a candidate against McCarthy or simply attempt to encompass the latter's defeat, has not yet been indicated by any official act of Tracy's.

The friends of Congressman Julius Kahn are after the scalp of City Attorney Percy V. Long. In the last campaign, Long and his office, and particularly himself and A. Graupner, an assistant, did all in their power to defeat Kahn for re-election. Now Long wants to be re-nominated for City Attorney. He has his political career all nicely mapped out in his own mind—two more years as City Attorney and then to the Superior Bench. But Kahn and his friends may spoil the Long program. Already they have put Ben McKinley, Assistant United States District Attorney, and nephew of the late President McKinley, in training for the City Attorneyship, and it looks very much as though Long has a fight on his hands. Kahn's people have much to say about the gall of a man who has sought to defeat the party's candidate for Congress asking a nomination for himself from that same organization.

There is much talk of harmony among the local Republicans. An effort is being made to get the insurgents and other estrays who have wandered from the camp of the regular organization in recent campaigns back on the reservation again. A citizens' committee of 100 or 200 leading merchants, financiers and professional men is being organized for the purpose of bringing the estranged elements of the Republican party together in the present campaign, and to also act as an advisory or steering committee in the selection of candidates for municipal office. It is said that the Republican County Committee will give its official indorsement to any ticket the Citizens Committee may name.

As the Municipal League of Independent Republican Clubs are out to reform themselves into office and such political jobs as they can "purify" sufficiently to make their own, harmony, if effected at all, will be on the lines of a division of the offices. To date the regular Republican organization appears to have tentatively selected William Crocker, the planing mill man, as their candidate for Mayor and then stopped. The twelve remaining municipal offices and the eighteen Supervisors are apparently still open for harmony negotiations.

It has been suggested that Frank W. Marvin, president of the Good Government League, might make a good City Treasurer. But this office has been, and will continue, to be a bone of contention, because of the fat pickings that go with it. The Treasurer has the appointment of an attorney, who has been cleaning up from $7000 to $10,000 a year, with possibilities of that sum being doubled, and even trebled, under the law providing for the collection of the collateral inheritance tax. Every political lawyer in San Francisco has his weather eye on the Treasurer's office, and the supporters of McDougald will have to get a wiggle on to hold him in that place.

Of course the fees of the Attorney for the Treasurer generally have a divisor of two or three, but even then the returns are worth the respectful consideration of the average lawyer.

Edwin J. McMurray, the boss of the Independent Republicans, is reported to have made a careful computation of the possibilities of the attorneyship for the Treasurer. Two years ago he ran E. L. Cutten on the Good Government League ticket for Treasurer, but his candidate was defeated by McDougald. McMurray is said to have amended his estimates of the revenues of the Attorney for the Treasurer under the collateral inheritance tax conditions, and is accredited with an increased desire for the office in proportion to the addition to the fee returns.

McMurray, although at the present time a reformer, may be said to have been born and bred in the school of practical politics. His father was the well known and popular plasterer and stucco worker, whose place of business was on Market street for many years. The elder McMurray trained with Chute, Courroy and McCord when that triumvirate sought to put Boss Higgins out of commission. His son studied law in the offices of Gunnison, Booth and Bartlett, no bad academy in which to gain the rudiments of an education in politics as well as of the law. About ten years ago the present Boss McMurray ran for Justice of the Peace and was defeated. He has been a reformer ever since. Whether he will have better success with his present aspirations the current campaign will determine. He is certainly a good enough politician to realize that his chances will be better with the regular organization than they would be with a hotbat ticket.

For the office of District Attorney the Republicans are without a candidate. In the general harmony scheme the name of Daniel A. Ryan, who ran for Mayor a year ago, was briefly considered. But Ryan did not think that it would be dignified for him to run for the law office after having been a candidate for Mayor. It would be a retrograde movement and then he might be suspected of being an office seeker.

The Horses and Carts tossed the name of Billy Humphreys into the arena, but there was no loud acclaim from the men on the political bleachers and the candidate was withdrawn.

Major Francis V. Keesling, who trained with the Lincoln-Roosevelt League during the last campaign, but who always kept an anchor to windward, is being considered for the office of District Attorney by both wings of the party. The Major was successful in his reform endeavor last year, and secured an appointment as Attorney to the Auditor.

Keesling is reported to have made some careful estimates in respect to the possible revenues of the Attorney for the Treasurer, but might be content with the office of District Attorney.

There are all kinds of pie—in fact, a whole political pastry shop, that might be used to promote peace and harmony in the Republican camp, and the indications are that the white-winged dove of peace will yet perch on a banner under which all the factions will unite.

The present municipal administration is run largely as a cross between an eleemosynary institution for the maintenance of briefless lawyers and an incubator for turning out fat fees for members of the bar with a political pull.

Mayor Taylor, himself, leads the legal parade by throwing his brambly curls to the municipal breeze at a salary of $6000 a year, which he garners into his personal treasury in addition to a salary of $4000 a year as Dean of the Hastings College of the Law, thereby levying tribute from both State and city.

Harry McKannay, the Mayor's private secretary, is another lawyer, who has been more conspicuous in that office than he was as a practitioner in the courts. McKannay was formerly of a law firm that also displayed on its sign the names of Daniel C. Deasy and George Connolly, both of whom have had ample leisure for outdoor exercise and politics without neglecting their law practice. McKannay, with the kind aid of Mayor Taylor, has thoughtfully provided an income from the city treasury for his former law partners. He has had Connolly made a Supervisor and Deasy appointed to the police bench. To be sure Deasy was formerly in the District Attorney's office, and his chances of an appointment for revenue were not diminished by the fact that his father was a complaisant member of the Oliver Grand Jury.

Recently McKannay secured the appointment of another underworked lawyer, W. W. Sanderson, to the Board of Supervisors to succeed Giannini retired. Sanderson was a witness for the prosecution in the Calhoun case and his appointment as a Supervisor incidentally followed closely his very satisfactory performance in that connection.

There was a little hocus-pocus in relation to this appointment that has not heretofore been dished up in the public prints. Giannini was a representative of the Italian colony. When he announced that he would retire to attend to his private business, Mayor Taylor sent for some of the leading Italian citizens to consult with them relative to the appointment of his successor. He gave his visitors to understand that he would appoint on their recommendation and was looking for an Italian for the place. But McKannay had an "Italian" in Sanderson, and the latter being of a mold that might permit of his being readily mistaken for a lean and hungry organ grinder, the Mayor named him as his "Italian." It is not claimed by the Italian citizens that McKannay deceived the Mayor, but they do feel that Poet Taylor passed them a verse or two of his choicest sonnets at that conference to which he invited them.

Another guest in the municipal institution for the aid of lawyers is Daniel C. Murphy, confidential attorney for James D. Phelan, and which condition contributed largely to his nomination for Supervisor.

In the last Republican municipal nominating convention there was an active band of lawyers who loudly inveighed against political machines and job chasers. Among these were Francis V. Keesling and Thomas E. Havens, who were aligned with the Lincoln-Roosevelt League reformers. Keesling is now attorney for the Auditor and Havens has a berth in the City Attorney's office. Another member of this band of purified hope was A. E. Graupner, who seemingly prefers a deputyship in the City Attorney's office and the salary of that job, guaranteed by the taxpayers, to the possibly larger revenues that might come to his purse by the practicing of law on his own account.

Curtis H. Lindlay, of Lindlay & Eickhoff, has recently acquired an appointment, suggestive of fat fees from the city treasury, in the office of attorney to look after the Hetch Hetchy water scheme, claimed by some to be a municipal affair and by others a private speculation.

Charlie Sweigert, the Police Commissioner, is credited with a self-control that would not permit him to shy were his name found on two payrolls, especially if one was sanctified by Reform. As an additional reward for his public service and private association with those devoting their effort to the uplifting of the city at a greater general expenditure and a heavier tax rate than ever before, Sweigert's brother was given the place in the District Attorney's office made vacant by the promotion of Deasy to his reward in a higher salary.

This is far from being a complete invoice of the legal plums that have been acquired by members of the bar willing to sacrifice themselves and their legal attainments at the altar of an assured salary from the municipal treasury, but it will give a measure of publicity to the self-sacrificing efforts of these martyrs to a higher development of public morals and general satisfaction of municipal affairs.

The local political situation is, in several respects, so much up in the air that it looks as though those horses, Gavin McNab, John C. Lynch, Tim Sullivan and Edwin McMurray, would have to turn aviators and conduct their campaigns from dirigible balloons.

On the one hand I am told that W. F. Herrin went East en route to Europe with a view to leaving the Republican machine to its own devices, and to show that the interests which he represents were in no way interfering with the local campaign. This was followed by a story that John Lynch is going to his summer home in Santa Cruz county just as soon as the Citizens Committee, reported to be in process of organization with a view to giving San Francisco a sane and sound government, shall have been completed. On the other hand it is said that Lynch will go to Santa Cruz, but for a temporary respite from the importunities of the political "macer," who appears to be of all classes and with a most varied schedule of demand.

From one source comes the report that the Citizens Committee will be announced early this week and that the interest taken in the movement by men conspicuous in the business world and the professions, has made it necessary to increase the membership from 100, as at first proposed, to 200. From an equally reliable quarter comes the statement that those promoting the Citizens Committee plan of securing a municipal ticket are much disappointed in that they have been unable to induce the class of men they wish to act on the committee.

The conditions have been made so conflicting and complicated under the new primary law that one would have to possess the peculiar powers of Le Sage's Devil On Two Sticks to interpret the situation. As to the average stay at home citizen he is in a state of confusion worse confounded.

Last week it looked very much as though Charles Crocker was to have the field to himself for the Republican nomination for Mayor. Now the friends of Charles S. Laumeister, former Railroad Commissioner and once Sheriff, announce that he will go before the electors at the primary as a candidate for that nomination. To contribute to the political puzzles of the day Laumeister seems to get his main support from Democrats, these Lieutenants of the late Sam Rainey—George Maxwell and Eddie Graney, being foremost in the ranks of the Laumeister boosters.

Dr. T. B. W. Leland seemed to be conceded the Democratic nomination for Mayor, but now the friends of former Supervisor H. U. Brandenstein are touting him for that office instead of the District Attorneyship.

The Lincoln-Roosevelt League is a thing of the past, from 10 to 25 per cent of its membership having gone over to the Municipal League Independent Republican Clubs, of which Edwin T. McMurray is the boss.

That faction of the Republican County Committee who, in the last campaign bolted the regular organization and went over to the Lincoln-Roosevelt League, now find themselves without a faction in which to create a disturbance, the McMurray Municipal League now wanting any part of them. Now, Dam, Hathorn, Newberry, Hazell and other of the malcontents are endeavoring to develop another faction made up of the discontented and the repudiated.

The Murrays will either be made a part of a harmonious Republican party or place a candidate of their own for Mayor in the field. They now say that they will do the latter, and insist that James Rolph Jr. is in a receptive mood.

One of the amusing features of the current political canvass was the "United Republican Clubs," the promoters of which furnished entertainment for a few days. The leaders of this short-lived movement were Robert W. Neal, who aspires to be Insurance Commissioner, Patrick Broderick, a one-time street inspector under the Board of Public Works, but now out of that job; George W. Owen, credited with being interested in the county line railroad project, which desires franchises and other special privileges, and some more citizens who may be said to constitute the & Co. The United Republicans opened a headquarters in the Merchants' Exchange building, it being an office room furnished with a table, having a cracked top and three chairs. Being thus fully equipped for business, they proceeded to issue circulars containing declarations of principles. As these declarations covered about everything that might be suggested in relation to the improvement of the city, one of the local papers was so moved to sympathy that it published an editorial indorsement of the movement.

The manipulators of this latest reform jokes were told to go way back and sit down. At last accounts they were well to the rear, but had not yet secured seats.

TEACHERS GIVEN CLOSING ORDERS

Superintendent McClymonds Issues Circular to Public School Principals

The following is the circular, in part, issued by City Superintendent of Schools McClymonds to the principals and teachers of the public schools:

Cure Your Rheumatism

Costs Nothing to Try

Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Pain in the back, have been cured, in the real meaning of the word, by a little Stillingia, Iodide of Potassium, Poke Root, Gualiac Resin and Sarsaparilla. Any one, even a young child, can take these remedies in any reasonable amount with perfect safety, and the results have been found to be astonishing. It has been proven that this combination makes up the best rheumatism remedy in existence, having actually cured many stubborn cases of over 40 years' standing—even in persons of old age.

The five ingredients mentioned above prepared with great accuracy and skill not only in regard to proportion, but also in selecting the best material, have been put up in compressed tablet form, and are called "Gloria Tonic."

If you suffer from any form of uric acid in the blood and have Rheumatism, Gout, Lumbago, Sciatica, this is the way to drive it out of your system in quick time.

That this great remedy for yourself free by sending for a trial package, to John A. Smith, 2222 Smith Bldg., Milwaukee, Wis. Send this notice with name and address on a slip of paper, and you will receive a trial package absolutely free. If you are in "Gloria Tonic" that you can have combination ready for sale and recommended in Oakland at Drug Co., Thirteenth and Broadway, and at Smith's, at 15th and 16th Sts., and at San Pablo.

TAFT ABANDONS ALASKA TRIP

Illness of Wife Restricts Him to Pacific Coast Visit in Fall

WASHINGTON, June 5.—President Taft has been forced, through the illness of Mrs. Taft, to postpone his proposed western summer trip until fall. Although he made no definite announcement heretofore, it has been the President's intention to depart in August on a ten weeks' tour of the West and Alaska.

It is said that the possibility of Mrs. Taft being able to accompany the President with safety is slight, although she is making satisfactory progress toward recovery from her recent illness. Faced with the necessity of leaving her behind and the possibility that a relapse might occur, Taft made up his mind to abandon the summer excursion altogether and endeavor to make a visit to the West in the early fall.

If it is possible for him to go West in September he may be able to visit the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition in its closing days, but the Alaska trip hardly will be attempted.

REBEKAH LODGE TO ENTERTAIN VISITORS

A large gathering assembled Saturday evening, May 29, to witness the initiation held by Oakland Rebekah lodge, No. 16, I. O. O. F. Fifteen candidates received the degree and four were admitted by card.

Next Sunday night the lodge will entertain its members and visiting Rebeahs in its new quarters, Nineteenth and Grove streets. A program and banquet will be followed by dancing. Mrs. Grace Stross is chairman of the committee in charge of the entertainment.

BERKELEY TENT, K. O. M. SELECTS NEW OFFICERS

Berkeley tent, No. 18, Knights of the Macabees, elected the following officers last Thursday night: Post commander,

S. J. Wright, commander, O. E. Brown; Lieutenant commander, F. E. Wilson; record keeper, W. H. Roach; chaplain, C. E. Nichols; sergeant, C. C. Young; first master guards, W. H. Moore; and master guard, W. J. Thibault. Master at arms, Frank Abigen; sentinel, W. W. Thomas; Pickett, W. C. Morse.

On Thursday evening, June 10th, the degree team of Oakland tent, No. 17, will visit here and confer the second degree. An elaborate banquet will follow the ceremonies. The social committee is composed of Frank Abigen, C. E. Nichols, W. H. Roush and R. M. Dibble.

WINNE GIVES REASONS FOR QUITTING POST

CHICAGO, June 5.—A London special cable says:

"The resignation of R. J. Winne, American consul-general here, is only partly due to political considerations. For personal and domestic reasons he is not sorry that he is returning to the United States. He thought he ought not to stay out of his country for more than three or four years, as his children were apt to grow up into Englishmen instead of Americans. The English climate does not suit his wife's health, and his children are becoming too English to suit the views of a good American."

POLICE BAR THE FLAG FROM A PRIZE RING

NEW YORK, June 5.—Police Inspector Miles O'Reilly permitted the scheduled boxing bouts to proceed at the Brooklyn Athletic Club last night, only after the American flags had been taken from the ropes and posts of the ring and draped from the ceiling. The inspector declared that the flag should not be placed where it could be stepped upon by the fighters, but should be hung above the ring. When the flags had been changed the fight proceeded without interruption.

GUATEMALA TO FIGHT MOSQUITOS AND FEVER

NEW ORLEANS, June 5.—According to information which has reached Consul General Morales Shenz, representative of Guatemala here, that country has decided to spend several million dollars in an attempt to render Port Barrios and several other cities of Guatemala free from mosquito plague and the fevers which have been the bane of residents there for centuries.

WOUNDS HEALED BY SUN AND AIR

New York Surgeon Gives Wonderful Discoveries to the Medical Profession

NEW YORK, June 5.—Dr. Rudolph Richter reports in a medical journal that sunlight and dry air have been proved to have a powerful healing effect upon various kinds of wounds.

But as dry air and sunlight are not to be had everywhere, Dr. Richter has provided a good substitute by employing a blue arc light. This consists of an arc light with a reflector and blue glass panes. The wounds are subjected to the light for a half hour daily.

Such exposures lead to very rapid drying of the wounds and are followed by the formation of scars, it is reported. The diminution of pain following exposure to the rays is said to be especially remarkable. Dr. Richter reports favorable results in treating plain granulated wounds, suppurating wounds, and especially chronic leg ulcers.

BODY OF G. W. HOUGH BROUGHT FROM PORTLAND

The body of the late George W. Hough, who died Monday in Portland, has been brought to this city, where it will be interred in Mountain View cemetery. The funeral services will be conducted Monday at 10:30 from the home of his daughter, Mrs. Byron Rutley, 77 Hamilton place. The deceased leaves a widow, Mrs. S. Hough, and four daughters, Mrs. W. S. Hamilton, Mrs. Byron Rutley, Mrs. Horace Haight, Mrs. Harry Barnes and a son, George W. Hough, Jr., of Sacramento.

The Attempted Robbery of Shakespeare.

Again the pundits are raising a clamor of dispute as to the authorship of the plays and poems of Shakespeare. To argue learnedly that Shakespeare could not have written the plays published under his name and staged by him has become a cheap device for gaining a certain sort of literary notoriety. Hence a vast amount of labor, ink and paper has been wasted in efforts to rob Shakespeare of his laurels. But it has been easier to dispute Shakespeare's authorship than to find a man to invest with his honors. Myron W. Hazeltine explored the Bacon myth by a very simple and convincing process. Pointing out that Sir Francis Bacon was a voluminous writer on many subjects, including the law, science, essays, fiction and even poetry, he said not a line he ever wrote bears the slightest resemblance in style and construction to the works of Shakespeare. Bacon's diction and literary method are so foreign to the writings of Shakespeare that it is impossible for him to have been the author of the Shakespearean books. Not only does the execution forbid the supposition, which is unsupported by any tangible fact, but Bacon's bent of mind makes the theory incredible.

However, Shakespeare was the familiar associate of a group of famous literary artists, of whom Marlowe, Ben Jonson and Greene were the most prominent, and by this contemporary group Shakespeare's authorship was unhesitatingly accepted. The lovers of Shakespeare, says a writer in the Galveston News, need but one witness in this case as against the field, and that one witness is Ben Jonson, who was a personal friend of both Shakespeare and Bacon. London was comparatively a small place then, and its literary group, if distinguished, was also small and very compact: the men composing it were in almost daily association, the chief topics at their coffee house meetings being literature and the drama. The theater was almost as prominent in the public eye as the court. Yet none of Shakespeare's contemporaries doubted that he wrote his plays or questioned his literary skill and capacity.

Shakespeare was born in 1564 and died in 1616. Lord Bacon was born in 1561 and died in 1626. Ben Jonson was born in 1574 and died in 1637. Jonson knew the respective mental abilities of his two friends; he knew the capacities of each; he was probably more in contact with their superb intellectual qualities than any other man in England. After Ben Jonson's own literary fame had been established he wrote of Francis Bacon as follows:

"No man ever spoke more neatly, more pressly, more weightily, or suffered less emptiness, less idleness in what he uttered." * * * "My conceit of his person was never increased toward him by his place of honors; but I have and do reverence him for the greatness that was only proper to himself; and that he seemed to me, by his work, one of the greatest men, and most worthy of admiration, that had been in many ages."

After the death of Shakespeare, and while Lord Bacon was still living, Ben Jonson wrote an ode addressed "To the Memory of My Beloved Master, William Shakespeare," in which ode he calls him the Star of Poets, and apostrophizes him as the "Sweet Swan of Avon." Among the other sentiments contained in this tribute to Shakespeare he adds:

"Soul of the ages! The applause, delight, the wonder of our stage! Thou art a monument without a tomb, And art alive still while thy books doth live, And we have wits to read and praise to give."

"Triumph, my Britain, thou hast one to show To whom all scenes of Europe homage owe. He was not of an age, but for all time, And all the Muses still were in their prime. Nature herself was proud of his designs, And joyed to wear the dressing of his lines."

Commenting on this quotation, John H. Kirilick asks: If Bacon had written Shakespeare, would not Jonson, of all men, have known it? Or, again, if Bacon had written Shakespeare, what inducement did he have to enter into a conspiracy with Shakespeare to withhold the truth, dupe the public, and make a nonentity and a hypocrite, a driveller, a mountebank and a fraud (which Shakespeare would be if another and not himself had written Shakespeare), as immoral as Dante or as Milton? Or if Shakespeare was a party to the scheme to wear the honors belonging to another man, were even his closest friends so blind that they could not see the fake attire, and bid him "doff the lion's hide?" Probably upon the theory that truth, like the light traveling toward us from the remotest stars, is nevertheless a slow coach, as it has not reached us yet, our wise men concluded after a lapse of 400 years to make the discovery, nevertheless, that Shakespeare did not write Shakespeare, but that Francis Bacon did.

The poet Milton never suspected that Shakespeare was a literary impostor; neither did any of the dramatists of the Restoration. In the period immediately following Shakespeare's death it became the fashion to panegyrize the Bard of Avon, and his fame continued to grow till the latter end of the nineteenth century, when the faking propensities of what is politely denominated higher criticism asserted itself in attempts to disprove what some people persisted in believing to be too strange to be true. The search through Shakespeare's works for cryptograms and hidden meanings is mostly moonshine, a species of literary soothsaying and divining to deceive the ignorant and persons fond of looking for marvels and portents and either too lazy or too incompetent to investigate and think for themselves. Yet with all this tom-tomming the whole band of Shakespearean hatchmen have been unable to agree upon any man to crown with Shakespeare's laurels. They cannot even point out a man who has left any literary remains comparable to the Shakespearean plays. Ernest Rhys has labored hard to make it appear that Shakespeare collaborated with Marlowe, Greene, Jonson and others, even going so far as to pick out passages in the plays written by this and that author other than Shakespeare. This is mere humbug and pretense. It is based upon nothing more substantial than supposition, and hence deserves no better name than charlatanism. The ghouls who are trying to plunder the literary sepulchre of the greatest dramatic poet the world has yet produced are in the category of the fool who fired Diana's temple at Ephesus that his name might be carried down to posterity. His deed is remembered with execration, but his name is only recalled by antiquarians. It will be so with the names they will be remembered merely as a band of ghouls and ignoble faddists seeking notoriety by the dead.

Oakland's Progress and Prosperity.

The high percentage of gain in Oakland's record of weekly bank clearings as compared with the corresponding period of last year continues. It stands at the head of the list of California cities this week, with a record of 33.7 per cent of gain to its credit, against Los Angeles, 27.7 per cent, and San Francisco, 7.1 per cent. This constant increase in the volume of its bank clearings is conclusive proof that Oakland is in a healthier and more prosperous business condition than any other city in the State. This fact is corroborated by other evidence than the bank clearings, and, what is more, in all departments of activity the outlook for the future here is rosy. Real estate dealers report a revival of activity in trading, an increased number of inquirers for desirable investments, and plenty of money in sight seeking to be placed on loan at a moderate rate of interest.

That the most optimistic views should be cherished of the future growth and prosperity of Oakland is by no means surprising, for there is a vast amount of money being spent here for private and public improvements. The public service corporations, particularly those engaged in transportation, are spending millions in permanent improvements. Some of these will mature at an early date and give rise to new forms of business activity. In the case of others the work of development will extend over a long period to come; but the vast sums of money which are being spent in carrying out the various enterprises in hand is circulated freely through the community, instilling new life and vigor into every branch of business. All this is supplemented by the large improvements of various character which the municipal administration is making, every dollar spent in which adds to the general prosperity of the people. Some of these public works will occupy many months to finish. Meantime elaborate plans are being prepared for others to follow, which will have the most important influence on Oakland's future progress and prosperity.

San Leandro's Cherry Festival.

San Leandro's cherry carnival has been a phenomenal success, as THE TRIBUNE expected it would be, and the enterprising promoters of it are to be heartily congratulated. Thousands of visitors attended the festival. Such a throng was never before seen on San Leandro's streets. A large proportion of the visitors had doubtless never visited the town before; but their admiration of it was all the more pronounced.

The weather was ideal. In fact, for cherry development it has been ideal since the winter rains ended on March 30. Never was there a season when the cherry crop was so large or the fruit in such perfect condition as it is this year, which means a larger income to the cherry growers of the San Leandro district than they ever had from their crops before.

The carnival will be productive of results of incalculable value, not only to San Leandro, but to Alameda county at large, for it has undoubtedly given many hundreds of the visitors entirely new views of conditions on this side of San Francisco bay. What is wanted is more local carnivals of a kindred character for the display of the fruit and flower productions of the vicinity. Hayward, Niles, Pleasanton, Livermore, Centerville and Alvarado, and possibly other towns, can hold festivals during the fruit bearing season of a similar character, for the display of special products, which will attract visitors from outlying districts and counties who have only an imperfect knowledge of their resources.

Governor Gillett's letter to the Italian consul is a model of diplomacy. It is courteous in tone and tenor, but it nevertheless conveys a sharp reminder and a suggestion that will not be lost on the consular representative of the Italian government. When a mob of the Italian king's subjects were rioting in defiance of the law, taking forcible possession of property to which they had no claim and by threats and violence preventing other laborers from going to work, the Italian consul had nothing to say. He did not counsel his countrymen to refrain from violence and disobedience to the laws of this country, nor was he at all concerned about the damage they might do to property. But the moment an obstreperous citizen of Italy gets prodded with a bayonet the Italian consul hastens to write the Governor a letter requesting him to afford protection to Italian subjects. While polite enough his letter was, in effect, an intimation that the Governor was not doing his duty and was not protecting the persons of Italian citizens. It contained no expression of regret over the occurrences at McCloud or disapproval of the lawless attitude assumed by his countrymen. With great urbanity the Governor assures him that the protection requested will be afforded, but at the same time he requests the Italian official to advise his countrymen to keep the peace and obey the law. It was a neat stroke. There would have been no trouble if the Italian laborers at McCloud had contented themselves with striking when their demands were not acceded to. But they refused to let other men go to work in their places, defied the sheriff, and finally took possession of the electric and manufacturing plant of the company. Because one of the lawless band has felt the point of a bayonet there is to be a stir in diplomatic circles. Perhaps somebody will be told not to be so fresh. We hope so.

The reduction made by the Southern Pacific Company in its carload rates for the transportation of the deciduous fruits of Northern California to the markets of Montana, Idaho and other inter-mountain States will yield a handsome profit to the fruit growers of Northern California and amply compensate the railroad company by the increase in freight which it is sure to give it.

Some "constant reader" of THE TRIBUNE is doubtless in want of something that he has not got or may have something to dispose of which somebody else wants. He should, therefore, not fail to read the classified pages in which he will in all probability find not only the information which will gratify his curiosity, but which prove may of great value to him also.

California's fruit crop, particularly that of Alameda county, is this year unprecedented, not only in volume but in quality.

LAW OF MASTER AND SERVANT

EDITOR TRIBUNE—Sir: George W. Taylor was employed as a brakeman by the St. Louis L. M. & S. R. Co., and had worked since May, 1892, when, on January 18, 1899, he was crushed to death. At that time he was attempting, in the discharge of his duty, to couple two cars which the railroad company had failed to equip with couplers complying with the Federal Safety Appliance Act. On February 21, 1899, letters of administration were issued. The complaint as of June terms, 1899, was filed in the State court of Arkansas on October 22, 1900, on the same date as the answer.

The defendant petitioned to remove to the Federal courts June 27, 1899, followed by a motion to remand, July 15, 1899, and the case was remanded on August 15, 1899. Then followed a second motion to remand the amended complaint. This was overruled November 22, 1899. Some time in 1901 the action was tried in the State court. Another trial took place on June 30, 1904. The administrator recovered $14,000 damages on July 1, 1904. The action was revived on the administrator's death, September 24, 1905, and was heard by the Arkansas Supreme Court on October 15, 1906, (first appeal 71 Ark. 445, second appeal 82 Ark. 593). The administrator's petition, since the motion by the defendant for a rehearing October 29, 1906, was denied November 19, 1906. On December 1, 1906, a writ of error to the Supreme Court of the United States was allowed, and on January 15, 1907, the record was filed in the Supreme Court, argued and submitted April 14, 1908, and decided on May 18, 1908, (210 U. S. 281). The Supreme Court of the United States felt constrained to reverse the judgment, which, on a second appeal, had affirmed the judgment of the Crawford Circuit Court of Arkansas, obtained by the plaintiff. There was no delay in the procedure required in that court.

Forms of the common law of master and servant had been complied with, and the widow and children of G. W. Taylor have not been awarded any compensation, although at the present writing ten years and four months have elapsed since he was crushed to death. Taylor was, at the time of his death, hardly thirty years of age and engaged in moving the commerce of the country. He was only one of the 53,446 employees whom the railroads killed in the twenty years ending June 30, 1907. In the course of that period 811,181 railroad employees were injured—a total of 865,227 railroad employees killed or injured in twenty years of railroading.

Not one of these 865,227 railroad employees received, pursuant to any law, quick, definite, and prompt compensation for his injuries, although it is a fact that every time six minutes elapsed during the year 1907, somewhere in the United States some employee was killed or injured, and in 1907 there were killed or injured 92,118, of whom 4534 were killed. The widows and orphans of every one of these 4534 railroad employees received, pursuant to any law, required to submit to the antiquated procedure of an action at law instead of obtaining prompt compensation.

Every civilized state has been forced to change the system of justice involved in the administration of the law of master and servant, and it is time that the people of the United States should relieve themselves from the stigma of being no more advanced in social legislation than is the Turkish Empire. Representative A. J. Sabath has introduced a bill (H. R. 1) at this present session of Congress which would make such judicial discretion by the courts impossible. This bill permits the mail carriers of the country to contract with the United States for the payment of prompt and certain compensation to their employees.

By this permission to contract, the freedom of contract is preserved and the Supreme Court could not declare the proposed enactment unconstitutional on that ground, and the employees at risk would not be subjected to ruinous delay when killed or injured.—Fair Play.

Editorial Comment From Press of the Country

ONLY REASONABLE POLICY.
The only reasonable policy for a President, whether he be a Republican or a Democrat, is the one announced by Mr. Taft. "The Southern States must be treated as well by the federal administration as any other States are treated, no matter whether they contribute to the Republican majority in Congress and the Electoral College, or prefer to remain loyal to their ancient idols."—Providence Journal.

MUCH TO BE DONE.
While the Southern people whom our excellent President so sympathetically addressed in his Petersburg and Charlotte speeches have marched forward with noisy strides all the while to national progress since the Civil war and the almost as destructive regime of carpet baggers, much still remains for the formation of "a more perfect Union." One of the most obvious of these things is an equitable distribution of the taxes and burdens of government.—Philadelphia Record.

RIGHT IN HIS PREDICTION.
President Taft is right in his prediction that there will be a new South. Florida has already set the pace by defeating a bill for disfranchising the negro voter.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

NO CHANCE TO SCOFF.
Leaders of the Southern Democracy, anxious to maintain the solidarity of their party, may scoff at the selection of a Democrat as a postmaster or a collector as a bid for individual votes. They cannot say that when the President names a non-political life officer upon a member of the opposition party.—Chicago Tribune.

WINNING RESPECT.
President Taft is just coddling up to the South, and is doing it in a way that wins him the respect of the people of that part of the country. He is for the best men in office, regardless of party. This may cause a pang in the politician's breast, but it sounds fine to all lovers of good government.—Bridgeport Post.

ETHICS IN MUSIC - - - By M. Debussy

"Why should people always attempt to find more in a work of art than the author himself has actually put into it?" he asked, somewhat unusually stirred. "The music-drama of 'Pelléas et Mélisande' is, from beginning to end, a clear and straightforward piece of composition following with scrupulous fidelity Maeterlinck's own narrative. Almost every word has been set to music in the time and rhythm suggested by the text. Indeed, the performance of the opera does not last much longer than that of the original drama. There is nothing very difficult to understand in this," he observed with a significant shrug of the shoulder.

"The public may have been disappointed in the fact that your composition does not constitute an opera as such work is generally understood," I hinted. "It is said, for instance, that your musical setting is merely a kind of psalmic declamation."

"That is true to a certain extent. My music-drama is different from any other opera in that it has been planned and written on simple and logical lines. I do not, for example, when two bars will suffice, waste ten or twenty bars to translate into music 'I love thee,' as is done by Meyerbeer and other composers. Both in the 'mise-en-scène' and the interpretation of sentiment I have taken care to let Pelléas and Mélisande move to their proper atmosphere and speak and act as I believe the author meant them to. In fact, I have attempted, in working out the details of the piece, to be as simple as possible, and to obtain a simultaneous and perfect union of music and drama.

"Although there can be no doubt as to Maeterlinck's position among the foremost literateurs of the day, it is equally certain that he does not know much about music," said the composer. "He admitted it himself to me at Ghent, when I went to see him, years ago, after I had decided to set 'Pelléas et Mélisande' to music.

"Well, it is the strangest thing I have ever heard of," he exclaimed. "Turn 'Pelléas et Mélisande' into an opera? You will never be able to accomplish such an amazing feat. How would you, for instance, interpret into music a phrase like 'Ah, qu'il fait beau dans les ténégres'?"

"I have already done it," I explained to him.

"Well," he replied, "if you have done that, you can do the whole work. For myself, I confess, I am, as regards music, much in the same state as a blind man is in a museum."

"Thereupon resolutely and unremittently I set to work on the score, which I took thirteen years to complete," said M. Debussy. "I am a slow worker, you know, and cannot turn out an opera regularly every year, as some composers do. I have never been able to write to order."

THE AMERICAN HUSBAND - By Anna A. Rogers

The American masculine claim of absorption in his work does not in the least justify such a condition. Frenchmen support their wives and still find time to go shopping with them too. Englishmen do likewise, and find energy left to place their sons in school, energy to watch keenly the love affairs of their daughters, unhesitatingly bidding this or that man be gone; moral courage and physical vitality left after the day's work to be in fact as well as fancy "the head of the house." They have the wisdom to have hours for play, for pure boyishness of living. And all this may be observed in the same middle class that with us turns the whole issue over to the wife, expecting of her all wisdom, though knowing her sheltered youth, and all vitality, to run unceasingly and unaided the whole machinery of the family. No wonder our women have "nerves!" No wonder they are becoming more and more restless (one of the first evidences of strain), more and more discontented as time passes. Masculine kindness to our women is sometimes so tangled up with selfishness that there need be no surprise that there is some confusion regarding them.

Not that our men want the money after which they are striving for themselves, for their pleasures. They do not. They are almost notoriously generous. Our rich men give, give, give, to their wives, their children, to colleges, to hospitals, to churches, until the whole world is amazed at their generosity.

The habit and fury of work, unreasoning, illogical, quite unrelated to any need, is a masculine disease in this country, and the whole social system has for years paid the inevitable penalty. Here and there a man tries to stop in time, but finds himself obsessed by work so that he can no longer think of anything else. He is as much a slave to it as is any opium-taker to his drug and drunkard to his potion. It is a grave danger, not only to the individual but to the whole American civilization.—Atlantic Monthly.

Reflections of a Bachelor

One of the meanest things for a woman about, although it will be how people down on earth can't see she has the best seat.

A man can never get over the idea that he ought to be doing something more worthy of his ideals than making his living.

The way to make a girl know you appreciate her is to take her to a baseball game and be proud of her not knowing the difference between a base hit and a slide to the plate.

A man can brag a heap about his front till he gets it.

Many a city man boasts of his bayonet on the farm—but he doesn't make strenuous effort to get back to it.

An unlucky thing about having a house full of children is when you would like to sleep in the morning.

CALIFORNIA SCHOOL OF ARTS AND CRAFTS

Arts and Crafts Building, 2130 Center St., Berkeley, California

Two years ago anyone who wished to study art had to go to San Francisco or the East. Since then an Art School has been established in Berkeley under the name of the California School of Arts and Crafts. This school is under the direction of Professor Frederick H. Meyer, formerly instructor in drawing in the University of California and Professor of Applied Art in the former Mark Hopkins Institute of Art. Associated with Mr. Meyer are the artists, Perham W. Nash, Xavier Martinez, Jessie Willard and others.

The school started in the Studio Building, but this proving too small for its growth the present location, 2130 Center street, was leased for a number of years and the building altered and equipped for a first-class school, the rooms being large and well-ventilated and lighted by carefully placed skylights, this latter feature thus securing the best possible light for the different lines of work.

The school specializes in training in the various branches of art, and encourages its pupils to further practical work along the lines they are studying.

Good results have been obtained with competition for posters, book covers, book and magazine covers, illustrations, designs for furniture and decoration of homes and stores by the application of original artistic work. The addition of metal work and additional work in the craft work, some splendid results having been attained along this line under the instruction of Mrs. Rufus P. Jennings.

Although the general tendency of the school is the industrial art, yet the fine arts are not neglected. Excellent work is done in the Life Class.

The annual picnic and family reunion of the United Artists' Mutual Aid Society of San Francisco will take place next Sunday at Folsom Park, Niles canyon. Committees have been working to make this outing a day of pleasure for the Mutual Aid Society and its friends.

There will be a big attendance of printers from all the bay cities. The committees in charge are:

PINCHOT NOT IN COMPANY 'KITING'

Neither He Nor Forest Service Will Help Promote Eucalyptus Concerns

SAN FRANCISCO, June 5.—F. E. Olmsted, in charge of the San Francisco office of the Forest Service, has just received a letter from Gifford Pinchot in which he asks that the public be informed that the use of his photograph in the literature issued by any eucalyptus company is entirely unauthorized, as well as any statements which purport to show that official sanction by the Forest Service had been given the methods or operations of any eucalyptus company. Olmsted, in speaking of the matter, said:

"The Forest Service is always ready to assist in the development of the eucalyptus industry in a state through the publication of authentic statements of the characteristics and growth of this species, but under no circumstances will it lend its aid to advertise particular eucalyptus companies, and any literature which contains statements to that effect is unauthorized."

Under proper conditions the growing of eucalyptus in California promises to be a profitable industry, but in some cases this fact is being taken advantage of by individuals and companies who desire to sell stock or land through the medium of greatly exaggerated statements of profits to be derived.

GERMAN OPTICAL EXPERT LOCATES

Rents Entire Store on Market Street, San Francisco.

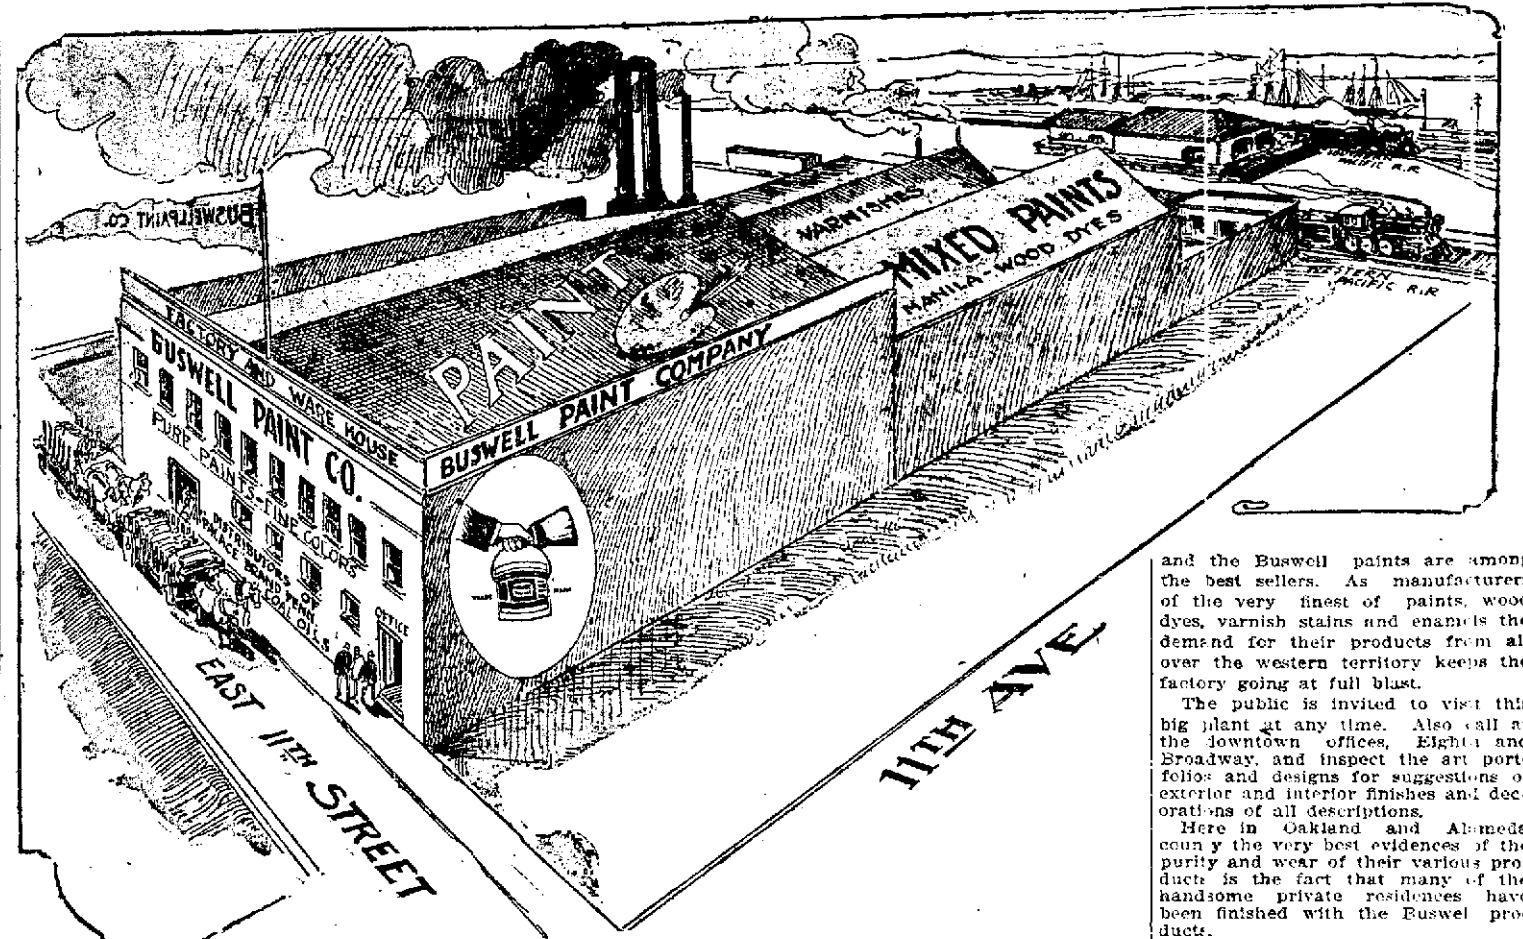

Mr. George Mayorie, the well known optical specialist, has rented the entire store at 900 Market street for a period of eight years at a rental of $45,000. His name ranks today the highest in the optical profession.

Nearly eighteen years ago Mr. Mayorie began upon all opticians who were in good standing to form a national optical organization. This was eventually accomplished through the great efforts of Mr. Mayorie. This organization is today the strongest optical society in the world, of which Mr. Mayorie is a charter member. Other high honors have been conferred upon him by the most important optical organization in the United States, namely the Optical Specialists' Association of America, electing him unanimously for three consecutive terms.

He is the inventor of Mayorie's International Eye Test Chart. He has also obtained United States patents on a new eye test cabinet. Both of his inventions are highly endorsed by the presidents of many State optical societies. The American Journal of Health, which is the American authority on matters of sanitation and hygiene, says: "George Mayorie's charts are the most improved methods of examining and correcting most complicated cases of defective eyesight, has been approved by the highest authority."

Several new optical instruments are now being introduced by Mr. Mayorie's new store for the examination of most complicated cases of defective eyesight. His reputation for honesty and integrity is well known to all opticians and citizens. His thorough theoretical knowledge and eighteen years of continuous practical work are the most convincing evidence of his great optical skill, which has made him famous. We wish Mr. Mayorie every success and prosperity in his new location.

MAMMOTH PAINT PLANT IN OAKLAND

The above illustration represents one of the most complete paint manufacturing establishments on the Pacific Coast. No manufacturer of any commodity in this locality can lay claim to as wonderful a growth as the popular Buswell Paint Company has achieved in the past few years. This growth, however, is not to be wondered at and the strides it has made are due principally to the fact that its brand of paints, varnishes and stains are the best that human ingenuity can turn out. The high grade of the goods that bear the Buswell trade mark have made a market for themselves that is not confined to local territory. All up and down the coast and reaching into the interior the Buswell Paint Company salesmen are found and the Buswell paints are among the best sellers. As manufacturers of the very finest of paints, wood dyes, varnish stains and enamels the demand for their products from all over the western territory keeps the factory going at full blast.

The public is invited to visit this big plant at any time. Also call at the downtown offices, Eighth and Broadway, and inspect the art portfolios and designs for suggestions of exterior and interior finishes and decorations of all descriptions.

Here in Oakland and Alameda county the very best evidences of the purity and wear of their various products is the fact that many of the handsome private residences have been finished with the Buswell products.

Oakland can well feel proud of having such a large and reliable concern in its midst. The Buswell Paint Company would be a credit to any city, and to those who are contemplating anything in their line, in addition to the high standard of goods handled, their promptness and general efficiency is a feature.

WILL OPEN BIDS ON ARTILLERY BARRACKS

SAN FRANCISCO, June 5.—Bids will be opened Monday for the construction of nine buildings for the new artillery barracks at Fort Winfield Scott at the Presidio, and Wednesday bids will be opened for twelve buildings for the new officers' quarters, which will form a part of the new infantry post, near the present artillery barracks at the Presidio. These buildings are a part of the reconstruction plan which is intended to make the Presidio a brigade post. As soon as the necessary arrangements can be made all the artillery companies will be placed in the barracks now at Fort Winfield Scott, and the present barracks will be occupied by infantry. The full full regiment of infantry to be stationed at the Presidio for several years will be the Thirtieth, which will arrive from the Orient in August. The Presidio at present has the largest artillery command of any post in the United States.

STEVENS LEAVES FOR LAST INSPECTION TRIP

SAN FRANCISCO, June 5.—Superintendent A. H. Stevens of the Railway Mail Service left today on his last official visit of inspection of the Northwestern states in his division. He will first go to Seattle and then to Portland and Spokane.

After July 1, Washington, Oregon and Idaho will be placed in the newly established division, the Thirteenth, under the superintendency of Frank W. Vallie. Stephens will be away two weeks.

SMUGGLERS OF CHINESE PLEAD GUILTY TO CRIME

CHICAGO, June 5.—William H. Clark and Robert W. Steinhilber, the latter said to be a son of Judge G. M. Stephenson of Cripple Creek, Colo., pleaded guilty in the United States district court today to charges of conspiracy to smuggle Chinese into the country. Judge Landis deferred sentence. Clark and Stephenson were among the eight men recently arrested on charges of assisting Chinese over the Mexican border and smuggling them into Chicago concealed in freight cars.

GRAND OPERA SEASON WILL OPEN AT PRINCESS

The W. A. Edwards International Grand Opera Company, which has earned a splendid reputation in New York and the other principal cities of the East, will begin a season at the Princess Theater, San Francisco, Monday evening, June 14.

The organization is most perfect and includes a complete orchestra, chorus and ballet.

The only members of the company that are known here are Signora Lina Bertozzi, Signor Alessandro Aracangeli and Signor Giovanni Gravinga. Bertozzi created quite a furor with the Milan Opera Company as Mimi in La Boheme, while Aracangeli triumphed with the same organization in several important roles, particularly as Scarpia in "Tosca." Gravinga was a great favorite during the last Tetrazzini season at the Lyric.

Talks on Teeth

Solid, Firm Teeth

It is the Alveolar Teeth which supply the body with food and firm they would be a failure. Artificial teeth that are put into the mouth simply to fill a cavity are a delusion and a snare and a fraud in the bargain.

It has always been more or less of a mystery to people who read about his work which we do for the first time to know how we can get teeth such as nature made them using the ordinary methods such as places a bridge work. That is because it is a secret but he has told the secret and he has made the first artificial teeth which are as good as the natural teeth and that we do not see in the ordinary artificial teeth is evidence enough that his work is satisfactory.

Young Russian Kills Himself Because Sweetheart Is Sent to Exile

NEW YORK, June 5.—A young Russian girl who was only 18 years old last Sunday after receiving a letter from her lover in Petersburg that his sweetheart had been sent to Siberia for life, committed suicide by shooting herself with a revolver.

The girl, whose name is not known, was found by a neighbor in her room at the Hotel

STATE OF MAINE FOLK PICNIC

New England Boiled Dinner Is Feature of Outing at Shell Mound

Eight hundred members and representatives of the state of Maine gathered at the Shell Mound picnic ground yesterday for the first annual picnic of the state of Maine Association of Culture. The new Legislature of the old Yankee state met the friends and acquaintances on the glad way and in a series of outdoor games they passed a most enjoyable day. Among the most interesting were races for young and old.

The old fashioned boiled New England dinner served to the picnickers on wooden plates, which gave individuality to the spread. No convenience was tolerated and the day was marked by a simplicity and informality.

The afternoon dancing was enjoyed in the pavilion. D. D. Perkins and his band were the contributors to the program and were enthusiastically applauded. It was a very happy day and it was ended by Prof.

Women's Tailored Suits

Of Unusual Elegance—Models of a Famous Maker

On Sale Tomorrow at $25 Actual Value $35.00 to $40.00

These are the most beautiful, the smartest, the best suits we ever placed on sale at twenty-five dollars—and that is very strong praise, we assure you. They are model suits. You know what that means—a wealth of care in the tailoring, the richest materials and the most lovely colors obtainable, many extra touches of elegance. Having successfully performed their mission, it is said that they secured larger orders from the buyers of the leading retail stores throughout the country than any model suits on exhibition in New York this season—the manufacturer was anxious to dispose of them quickly, and sold them to us at an actual loss. In the collection you will find both two and three-piece suits and a full range of women's and misses' sizes. The cheapest suit in the lot would be a glorious bargain at $35.00—many of the suits are worth $38.50—a few are worth $40.00. Beginning tomorrow you can take your unrestricted choice from them all for $25

A New Lot of Beautiful Maltese Silks

That Immensely Popular Fabric for Street and Evening Wear

On Sale Tomorrow at 29c See Washington Street Window Display

Maltese Silk is now so well known that anything we might attempt to say in its praise would savor of "painting the lily." It is heavier and better than Japanese Silk, and far more beautiful than the popular messaline. It is three-quarters of a yard wide, and the lot we place on sale tomorrow includes all the following colors—white, cream, Copenhagen, Alice, old blue, light blue, old rose, mulberry, woodrose, reseda, mais, pink, brown, gray Nile green and red. Come promptly. Hundreds of women have been waiting for us to announce this sale, and if this shipment meets with the enthusiastic reception its predecessors received the limited quantity we have will disappear like magic. Maltese Silk is so beautiful—and so superior to anything in the market at such a small price—that it almost compels those who see it to buy. It is equal to any 50c fabric on the market. On sale tomorrow at 29c. And this is positively your last chance to get Maltese Silk at this price.

DEMAND FOR BUSINESS REALTY

Increased Inquiry the Feature of the Past Week

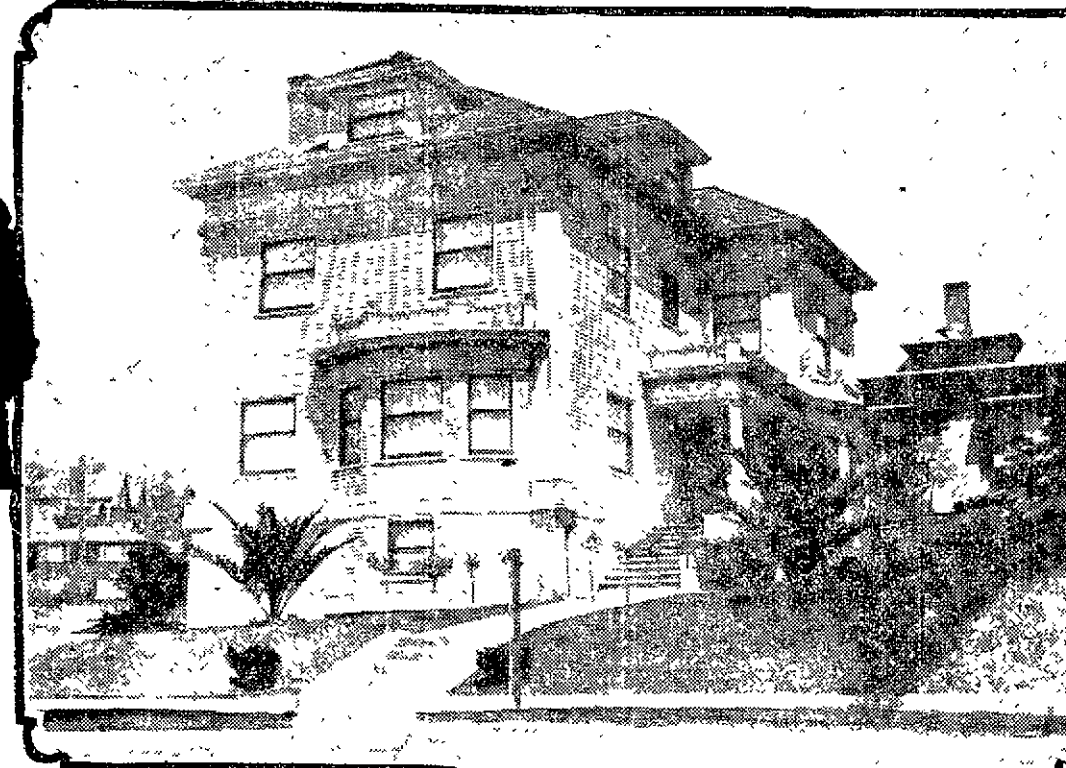

OAKLAND realty dealers note a marked improvement during the week in realty trading. All of the principal firms in the business report satisfactory conditions, an increased number of buyers, more private money seeking borrowers at reasonable rates of interest on satisfactory security, which is conducive to more extensive improvements, and a broader and more liberal system of loaning on realty and for building on the part of the banks. "The trouble with the money market," remarked one prominent real estate dealer, "is a thing of the past in Oakland. We have no occasion to have any further concern in that respect, for we are out of the woods altogether."

Demand For Business Property

One of the notable features which has developed during the week is the desire on the part of buyers to acquire business property of moderate value. But the holders of such properties are alive to the situation and they are shy about naming a figure. It is easier to get a prospective buyer for this class of business property than it is to get a seller. No better evidence than that is needed to warrant the assertion that Oakland property-owners have reached a better and fairer understanding of the value of their possessions than they ever had before, and the desire on the part of those who have money to invest in realty to purchase such properties at current market values is a positive demonstration of the faith in them that Oakland has an era of great prosperity and business development opening before it at the present time.

Public Improvements

The vigor with which the municipal administration is pushing public improvements is exerting a wonderful influence on property values and private improvements. Wherever the city has acquired property for park purposes and begun to improve the same, or has expanded its fire protective system in the form of new fire engine-houses, the construction of salt water pumping stations and the extension of the salt water mains, the effect on the values of adjacent property has been instantaneous. These have at once responded buoyantly to their influence. In the neighborhood of the new parks in course of development hundreds of thousands of dollars are being spent in the erection of new dwellings, changing the whole aspect of the neighboring territory. The extension of the salt water mains into the southern part of the business district, which has heretofore received but little attention, for which a contract was awarded during the past week, has put a new complexion on the future business uses of property in that direction and will undoubtedly stimulate the erection of a much higher type of business structures than have existed heretofore, structures more in keeping with the opportunities that section of the city offers for the purposes of business.

Railroad Development

The progress of railroad developments in the same quarter is having the same stimulating effect. The starting of work on the Western Pacific Company's passenger and freight depots in the southern part of the business quarters is removing all doubt regarding the plans of that corporation and a more tangible appreciation of the prospective uses and values of property is following as a natural result. Then, again, the city at large is feeling the beneficial influence of the millions of dollars which the railroad corporations are spending in the development of their respective plans for the improvement of their systems. Moreover, the prospect of the people approving a new bond issue of over three millions for additional public improvements is working to the general advantage of Oakland realty. Oakland is positively in the swim, floating on the full tide of prosperity.

OPTIMISTIC VIEW OF THE MARKET

One Realty Dealer Who Finds Business Quite as Active as After the Fire

Speaking of the condition of the realty market at the present time, D. F. Money remarked one day during the past week when interviewed:

"I am doing more business at the present time than at any time since the fire. While the amount of cash involved in the transactions is not equal to what it was at that time and while the sales are not as large as they were at that time, the volume of business is in excess of any time since the fire. The amount of property I have recently sold that will be immediately improved in a large number of cases by San Francisco and outside people is very gratifying. In some cases I have sold the same piece of property as many as three times in thirty days, which is an unusual thing. The following are some of my recent sales: Apartment house on Sixth street near Grove, $18,600; lot on Jackson street near Fourteenth, $12,500; lot and apartments on Twentieth street between Grove and Telegraph, $9000; thirty-two lots in Gateview tract, $8000; lot and flats on Fifth avenue between Eleventh and Twelfth streets, $7500; house and lot on Eleventh avenue and East Fifteenth street, $6500; three lots in Sylvan Crest tract, $3800; lot and flats on Arlington avenue, near Alameda, $4500; lot and pair of flats on Fifty-seventh street near Shattuck, $4700; house and lot on West street near Thirty-ninth, $3850; lot on Isabella street near San Pablo $3950; two lots in Sylvan Crest tract, $2400; two lots on East Twenty-seventh street near Twenty-third avenue, $2600; house and lot on Fifty-first street near Grove, $5000; four lots in Sylvan Crest tract, $5000; house and lot on Pacific avenue, Alameda, $1050; house and lot on Nineteenth avenue near East Twenty-seventh street, $1500; lot in Sylvan Crest tract, $1500; lot on Forty-fifth street near Telegraph, $1350; house and lot on Forty-fifth street near Telegraph $3250. In addition to the above I have sold four small ranches for $28,000 and have closed another large ranch deal over twice this price and do not see any excuse of complaining of either hard times or dull business."

SATISFIED WITH THE SITUATION

A. J. Snyder Makes Numerous Sales For Moderate Figures During the Week

"This office has been doing a fairly good business during the past week," said A. J. Snyder, in response to an inquiry regarding the condition of the realty market. "I am quite satisfied with the situation. I have closed a number of sales; others are in the course of being closed up, and quite the public interest in lots in the Linda Vista tract is very satisfactory." Among Snyder's sales of the week are a five-room cottage located on a 43x70-foot lot on the west side of El Dorado street near Fairmont, sold for Charles M. MacGregor to Elizabeth Wein, for $1500. For Mrs. J. E. Parr to Christian Holm, an improved lot, 75x132 feet on the east side of Vernal, north of Parkway, Piedmont, for $3200. For J. J. White Jr. to W. W. Bruener, house and lot, 40x120, on Perry street, east of Oakland avenue, for $5000. For J. L. Darrow to Charles M. MacGregor, seven unimproved lots on the south side of Fifty-third street, east of San Pablo avenue, consideration private. For Mrs. Gressella McAllister to H. H. Adams, unimproved lot, 40x130 feet, on the south side of East Twenty-seventh street, 326 feet east of Thirteenth avenue, for $1000. For George H. Strong to Henrietta Lagerson, two-story house and lot on the northwest corner of Tenth and Magnolia streets, for $5000. For Morris Isaacs to Charles E. Lyon, house and lot, 35x100 feet, on the south side of Thirty-fifth street, 382 feet west of Grove. The house contains seven rooms and bath. Consideration, $4500. The Board also made provision for the street work in front of the property and for paving the engine-house yard. The architect estimates that the engine-house will cost about $3574. The cost of street work and paving will probably be about $1000. On the other three engine-houses, the Board let a few months ago, the progress is rapidly. There are three of reinforced concrete, fire and earthquake proof and there will be no better engine houses on the coast when they are finished.

Real Estate Dealers Note a Great Improvement in the Tone of the Market

M. T. MINNEY'S MELROSE HOME

"The Heights" Are Being Crowned With a Handsome $8000 Residence

M. T. Minney, president of the realty firm he took his name, is having a new residence erected for him on the slightly elevated site of the Melrose Heights tract. The house will command a view of the entire bay region from San Leandro on the north; a sweeping panorama comprising glimpses of estuary, bay and cross-country scenery scarcely equaled and certainly not excelled in the country.

The architect, A. Merrill Dowser, has introduced a suggestion of suburban English into his work, modified to meet the conditions imposed by the use of local materials and methods.

The exterior treatment will be of rough timber and shingles, the latter laid in wide double courses, and the roof having a wide overhang. A large balcony, a large and well sheltered sleeping porch, the entrance porch and a broad terrace. The lot, a double one, having a frontage of 80 feet and a depth of 150, has been carefully surveyed and plotted under the architect's direction, and a comprehensive scheme of landscape development will be carried out. The entire rear of the lot is devoted to use as a tennis court of excellent size, this being reached by a tunnel of porches running from the house to the garage, which will be located at the rear of the house near the court.

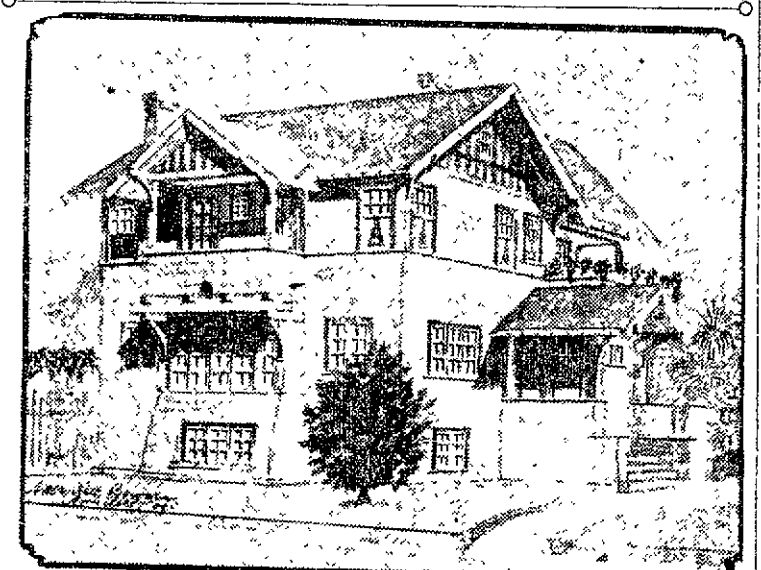

In arrangement the house is based on what is termed "central column" plan, the hall being located in the center of the building, with all important rooms leading from it. The staircase is featured in this room, and a roomy seat and heavy wood wainscot add to its attractiveness. To the left on entering and up one step from the general floor level is the living room, an apartment about 14x24, with a library nook in which is a large open fireplace, flanked by bookcases and seats. The dining room has its entrance covered by a small porch, and a roomy through double French doors. Another pair of French doors gives access to the terrace overlooking the boulevard and the distant bay. The kitchen is equipped with every aid to the housekeeper.

The servants' bedroom connects with the kitchen and hall leading to the billiard room in the basement. The billiard room being under the living room is of the same size, and will be paneled almost to the ceiling and have heavy wood beams. A low, broad settle near the fireplace and a stain shield running around the entire room are the special features.

The house will be heated by steam or hot water. The second story contains three large, well arranged bedrooms, a dressing room, bathroom and separate toilet. The closets are large and ventilated by windows and lighted by electricity. Every bedroom has direct communication with at least one balcony or the sleeping porch.

The finish floors of the first story will be of quartered oak and the second

M. T. Minney's New Residence in Course of Construction on Melrose Heights to Cost $8000.

EXTENSION OF SALT WATER MAINS

Thirty-two Business Blocks to Be Covered by This Fire Protection System

At last Wednesday's meeting the Board of Public Works awarded the contract for the extension of the salt water mains for fire protection between Eighth and First streets and Franklin and Washington, it having been found that there is enough money in the fund to extend the system over this area of territory in excess of the original plans. This extension comprises sixteen blocks, two of which are occupied by the county building and will be practically covered by the extension. The extension will cover sixteen blocks and will be on either side of the pipe line. Two weeks previously a contract was awarded for the laying of the main between Eighth and Fourteenth streets, and Washington and Franklin streets. The laying of the salt water mains from the pumping station at the Willows, on the shore of Lake Merritt, has been temporarily stopped by a lawsuit instituted by an unscrupulous bidder for the contract. The later contracts are free, however, from the entanglement and pipe-laying will be first done on Franklin street, so as to facilitate the paving of that street with bituminous rock. These improvements will have the effect of revolutionizing Franklin and intersecting streets.

story rooms will have polished Oregon pine floors.

A very comprehensive scheme of decoration has been worked out. The building will be ready for occupancy about the middle of July and will cost in the neighborhood of $8000.

MELROSE HEIGHTS BARBECUE SALE

Excursion and Feast Results in the Sale of $90,000 Worth of Lots

M. T. Minney, president of the M. T. Minney Company, says that the barbecue and excursion to Melrose Heights last Sunday created widespread interest and proved an immense success. Answers to the company's advertising were received, he says, all the way from Portland to San Diego and east as far as Washington, Pennsylvania. Six or seven thousand people visited the tract. Large excursion parties came from Fresno, Stockton, Santa Rosa, San Jose, Vallejo and other interior towns. One hundred and sixty-five people came from Fresno alone. Every one seemed pleased. A great many people expressed themselves as being delighted with Melrose Heights and many bought lots on that day, but a much greater number have made deposits during the week. About $90,000 worth of lots have been sold so far as a direct result of the excursion.

The excursion and barbecue was a great boost for Melrose Heights and incidentally will no doubt result in a great deal of good to Oakland generally, as a great many people who took advantage of the occasion to come to Oakland, have remained and looked around their new quarters at M. T. Minney Company's offices. Many expressions of surprise were heard regarding the wonderful growth of Oakland during the past two or three years. Many of these people had not been here during that time and some of them had never been in Oakland before.

Two Four and Two Five-room Apartment Houses to Be Built on Twenty-first Street, West of San Pablo Avenue, Costing $6850. McCall & Wythe, Architects.

MORE APARTMENT HOUSES GOING UP

One Just Finished on 32d St. and Another Started on 21st Street

A four room apartment house has just been finished for L. E. Voice on Thirty-third street, between Grove street and Telegraph avenue, from plans drawn by McCall & Wythe, at a cost of $5000.

The same architects have designed another apartment house which is being erected on Twenty-first street, west of San Pablo avenue, for August Sigwart. It contains two four and two five room apartments. Beam ceilings and open fireplaces are the main features in the living and dining rooms of each set of apartments. The structure will cost when finished $6850.

CONVERSION OF COTTAGE INTO HANDSOME FLATS

One story cottage owned by Ira F. Maynard, on Seventh street, between Harrison and Alce streets, fronting on Harrison street, has been raised and is being altered into two flats, at a cost of about $1000. The cottage constitutes one of a row of handsome structures of various designs erected on the block some years ago by W. J. Dingee on the Chauche property.

Three-story, Eighteen-room Flats on Brush, Between Seventeenth and Eighteenth Streets, to Cost About $8000. Jos. P. McNamara, Owner; F. A. Muller, Architect.

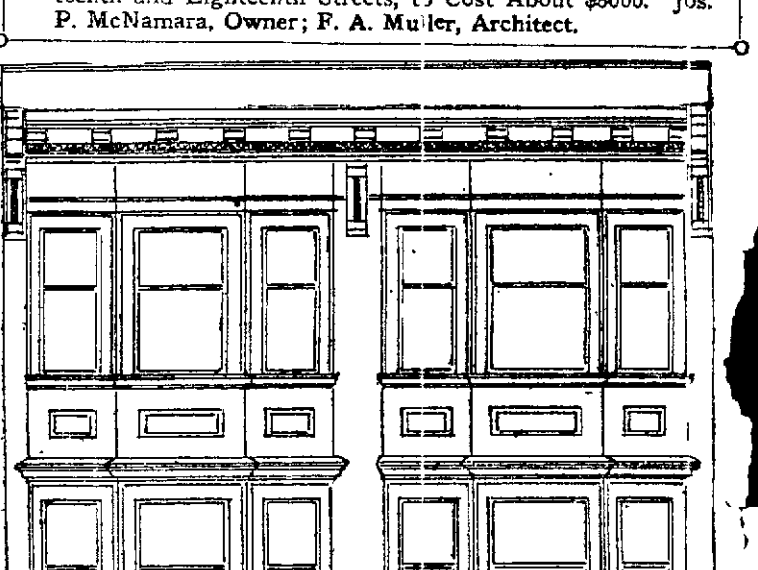

DERBY ESTATE IMPROVES LOT

Apartment Building to Be Built on Corner Fruitvale Ave. and East Fourteenth St.

FRUITVALE, June 5.—Plans are being prepared by the Derby Estate Company for a two-story modern store and apartment building to be erected on the southwest corner of Fruitvale avenue and East Fourteenth street. While the plans are not yet accepted it is understood the building will be of frame structure and will cost in the neighborhood of $15,000. The lower floor will consist of five stores, while the upper story will be arranged into flats and offices.

The improvement of this property means a great deal for Fruitvale. Many unavailing efforts have been made by would-be purchasers to secure some of the land, as it is most desirably situated in the center of the business district. The building of this structure is part of the general activity noticeable in the Fruitvale and Melrose district lately. Many buildings are being constructed and a number are being planned. The Bowdoin building and the Mesonic Temple, both magnificent structures, are nearing completion, while the Knights Pythias building will be under way within a few weeks.

Three-story, Eighteen-room Flats on Brush, Between Seventeenth and Eighteenth Streets, to Cost About $8000. Jos. P. McNamara, Owner; F. A. Muller, Architect.

3-STORY FLATS ON BRUSH STREET

A three-story eighteen-room flat building has just been completed for Joseph P. McNamara, well-known in musical circles, on Brush street, between Seventeenth and Eighteenth streets. The plans were drawn by Architect F. A. Muller, and the building has cost about $8000. It is quite an imposing addition to the locality in which it stands.

IMPROVEMENTS MADE IN PIEDMONT PROPERTIES

Wickham Havens Incorporated, reports that the installation of electric service in East Piedmont Heights, Piedmont Knoll, Piedmont by the Lake and Lake Shore Park Heights has progressed rapidly and will be completed within ten days.

"Gas" mains are being laid through Fourth Avenue Terrace and will soon be in readiness for customers. The enthusiastic response to our home-building effort, as added, has been very gratifying indeed—the exceedingly low margin required of the client, together with the prevailing low cost of materials, together have brought the last word in splendid home-building propositions at this time."

IMPROVEMENTS ON SOUTH SIDE

Rushing Western Pacific Railroad Depot Construction--Hitch in Plans

The Western Pacific Railroad company is rushing work on its passenger depot at Third and Washington streets and the freight depot on Third street from Harrison to Alice street. The concrete foundations of both structures are being laid and the mold frames for the reinforced concrete walls of the passenger depot, which will be a three-proof building, are being erected. The freight depot will be a wooden building. As fast as the concrete foundation walls set, the heavy sills of the building are laid. Big gangs of men are being employed by the contractors on both buildings.

Two reports are at present in circulation concerning two pieces of property which the Western Pacific is said to want on the north side of Third street, located between the properties which it possesses on that side of the thoroughfare from Webster to Oak streets and which are involved in the application before the council for a franchise, an ordinance for which is now pending final passage before that body. One of these is the school yard of Harrison primary school, which occupies the eastern one-half of the Third street frontage in the block between Webster and Harrison streets and abuts against the western half of the block now owned by the corporation. The office of the superintendent of schools reports that no overtures have been made for the purchase of the school yard, 100x150 feet--but it is reported that the railroad company's plans contemplated after getting its spur track franchise to offer in exchange the western half of the south side frontage of Fourth street, from the school department's property line to Webster street, for a school yard.

Regarding the Bendel property, the company is said to have relied on getting the spur track franchise across Alice street without protest and then carrying the matter into court in a condemnation suit. This project has, however, been stopped by the protest of the Bendels against the use of the street for railroad tracks and, inasmuch as the Bendel property covers the entire frontage on the east side of Alice street, the necessary majority frontage to force the granting of the franchise is not obtainable.

Without the franchise, condemnation proceedings cannot be instituted. It is in the air, however, that an amicable adjustment regarding the price has been reached. Whether this is so or not lacks confirmation.

NEW BRICK BLOCK ON SEVENTH ST.

Louis Schaffer to Erect Turkish Baths Building Between Broadway and Franklin

Ex-Councilman Louis Schaffer, who also served a term as chief of police, is about to erect a three or four-story brick block on the north side of Seventh street, 100 ft. from the east side of Broadway. The building will be built to be devoted to a Turkish bath establishment. The land has been occupied up to date by a group of dilapidated one-story wooden structures, part of which was occupied by a Japanese grocery and small ware store. Wreckers began work on Thursday to tear these structures down and clear the land, which has a frontage of about thirty-nine feet on Seventh street and a depth of 100 feet, preparatory to excavating the foundation and basement for the new structure. The new building will cost from $35,000 to $40,000, as estimated by the owner.

Another magnificent home in that district that will soon be occupied is the new residence of H. H. Hart, the well-known old man. The garden has already been completed and the family is at present living in the $20,000 structure that will serve as a garage when the new home is ready for occupancy. The building itself is estimated to have cost $30,000 and is built of concrete, containing large rooms and a beautiful reception hall. The structure is placed on an eminence overlooking the city and commands a superb view of the surrounding country. It is just three hundred feet southeast of the new Claremont hotel, upon which work will be resumed in the near future.

Big Apartment House
Mrs. Margaret Everett has secured a permit for the erection of an apartment house containing 32 rooms, to be situated at the corner of Stuart and Cherry streets. The building will cost $12,500 and will be two stories in height. It will be an up-to-date structure and will contain the latest improvements in lighting, elevator systems and other modern conveniences.

Thousand Oaks Tract
The property of the new Thousand Oaks tract is reported to have been active during the past week, and already a large number of applications have been made for permits to build in

BERKELEY MAKES GOOD MAY RECORD

Railway and Building Improvements Are Cutting a Big Figure at Present

BERKELEY, June 5. -- Besides the usual activity in building both in the residence and business sections of Berkeley, the opening of a great number of streets and the improvement of new tracts are causing large numbers of home-seekers to visit Berkeley and many substantial sales of desirable building lots are reported for the week by Berkeley realty dealers.

Street Grading
The grading of the streets in the new Berkeley Heights tract has progressed rapidly this week. Oxford street, which extends across the entire width of the tract, is already graded and work has been commenced on Contra Costa avenue, which extends from the car terminus eastward to Spruce street, the easterly line of Berkeley Heights.

Realty Excursions
Large crowds are being attracted by the excursions which are being run to the new Berkeley tracts. The new car line in the vicinity of Northbrae will be extended to the new Berkeley Heights tract and it is the intention of the company handling the tract to offer over franchise for the extension of this line out Arlington road to the county line.

The Southern Pacific Company also has a large force of men at work on the 50-foot canal which is being bored at the "Circle," the western end of the new tracts in the northern section of Berkeley.

Claremont Avenue Widening
The widening of Claremont avenue has now been definitely decided upon after over two years of hesitation on the part of the city trustees and already the work of cutting down the trees that will interfere with the work has commenced and is being carried upon the property owners along the avenue.

H. W. Taylor Residence
The magnificent new home of Henry W. Taylor, Berkeley, in the district which involved an expenditure of $150,000, is now nearing completion and the owner is at present in Europe selecting furniture for the new residence.

The building is made entirely of reinforced concrete and is one of the most beautiful homes on this side of the bay. On the lower floor, one entire wing of the structure is devoted to the use of the servants. The grounds will be beautified by an ornamental garden, on which work has already been commenced.

New Heinz Residence
The new Heinz residence in the same district has been completed and the $75,000 home will be occupied in the near future. A landscape gardener is at present employed in laying out one of the most elaborate gardens in the county. The garden will be surrounded by low walls and will contain some of the rarest imported shrubs and plants that can be obtained.

Hart Home Nearly Finished
Another magnificent home in that district that will soon be occupied is the new residence of H. H. Hart, the well-known old man. The garden has already been completed and the family is at present living in the $20,000 structure that will serve as a garage when the new home is ready for occupancy. The building itself is estimated to have cost $30,000 and is built of concrete, containing large rooms and a beautiful reception hall. The structure is placed on an eminence overlooking the city and commands a superb view of the surrounding country. It is just three hundred feet southeast of the new Claremont hotel, upon which work will be resumed in the near future.

Building Permits
Applications have been made for permits to build as follows:
A. Bertin, 1888 University avenue, two-story 4-room cottage at University and Milvia streets, $1000 each.
W. O. Elmer, Spaulding and Dwight way, 1-story 3-room house at Eunice and Spruce, $2500.
G. G. Darrell, Eighth and Addison streets, addition to the Pastime Theater on Shattuck avenue and Dwight way, permission having been granted by the town trustees, $300.
Harry Williams, 708 Channing, alterations to his home, $300.
Two-story, 6 rooms, corner Oregon street and California; Mrs. Carrie Sawyer, owner, $1200.
One-story 5-room bungalow, on Jefferson street, near Allison way; O. H. McCann, owner, $1800.
One-story, 3-room bungalow, 2219 Byron street; C. O. Brison, owner, $450.
Remodeling of dwelling at 2623 Benvenue avenue; J. C. Darnin, owner, $1700.
Three one-story 3-room cottages on Channing way, near Benue street, cost, $200 each. Owner, Nestor Ahlstrom.
During the month of May, 72 building permits have been issued by inspector Smith at a total estimated cost of $172,500.

Residence of James Sutton, 2301 Prospect, Berkeley.

IMPROVEMENTS SOUTH OF ESTUARY

Alameda Building Improvements Are Numerous and Realty Prospects Good

ALAMEDA, June 5. -- Actual transfers in real estate are not numerous this week, but there is a steady tendency toward an upward movement both in values and building. Rents are normal. Times are considered good by those who deal in realty properties, but the holding back of those who are inclined to buy or build is said to be an indication on the part of the prospective investors to obtain the choicest.

East End Improvements
The east end presents a phase of great activity. Since the opening of the Pratt tract the eyes of the investors have been centered in this section. The property is considered to be of the best for investment purposes. Twenty-one homes have been built in the east end by Delaney & Radlett and all are now occupied.

The choicest lots all over the city have been taken up and there is a steady call for property all over the city both by local investors as well as those from the surrounding bay cities and especially is this evidence by the easterner, who is that portion of the city. Most of the homes which are being planned for that section will cost in the neighborhood of $4000 and the natural beauty of the tract, which has for years served the Berkeley children for picnic grounds, gives opportunity for the erection of elegant bungalows and imposing structures amid the artistic surroundings of the oak grove.

West End Prospects
The west end is not to be overlooked for, in that section, there are many valuable plots which will require a considerable amount of money to purchase. The owner is holding on as the outlook for a live season is already assured from all indications.

New Buildings
Delaney & Radlett are working over plans for two magnificent residences to be erected in this section of the city. One of the homes is to cost in the vicinity of $10,000 and will be of the Queen Anne type of architecture. The other is for a prominent citizen of San Francisco, who has taken advantage of the opportunity offered by Alameda for a residence. This home will cost approximately $7500 and will be of the art nouveau type.

S. P. Tracklaying
Work is progressing rapidly on the Southern Pacific tracks on Euclid avenue. The widening of the space between the tracks will serve toward the early electrifying of the road and this is being considered by realty dealers as one of great moment to the city in general.

New Power House
The big steel frame structure of the new power plant along the estuary is making rapid headway and hundreds of hands will be given employment when it is completed. The building will be fire-proof and the most modern applications in every line will be installed when the building is finally completed.

What Realty Men Say
In commenting on the realty market, E. A. Radlett of the firm of Delaney & Radlett said:
"Early in the season I predicted a most successful year in the real estate and building market. The rains in the early part of the season necessarily delayed building for a time. But I believe my forecast has come true. Witness the new homes that have been built in the East and all over the city. These homes were snapped up before the buildings were finished and in many instances the homes were sold from the plans."
"It is hard to meet the demands of the outsider. He wants the best and while all of the choicest homes have been flooded the realty offices with inquiries as to the best locations and most favorable localities for investment.

taken up there are many desirable lots remaining upon which lovely homes could be erected. Alameda property at the present time is being sought for from all parts of the country. This is essentially a home town and those who have followed the wonderful progress of the city are becoming more and more anxious to take advantage of the great opportunities offered for investment. Conditions are good. The market is upon a firm basis and never in the history of this city has there been such a demand for investment."

William Hammond Jr. of the real estate firm of Hammond & Hammond, says:

"We have several deals under way but at the present time I am not able to tell you exactly their nature. I will, however, tell you that there is a probability of a large manufacturing plant the best being located in Alameda shortly. The matter is at the present time in a state of embryo, but if the deal goes through the city of Alameda will be greatly benefited. The market is very healthy and there is a steady upward tendency. One of the best features is the fact that there is absolutely no inflation in values. I maintain that Alameda really is at this present time on a firmer and sounder basis than it has ever been in the history of the city."

Building Permits
Following are the building permits issued by Building Inspector John Davies:
Owner, Mrs. Mallon, builder, C. W. Ma-Rae; improvements to 100 Grand street; cost, $700.
Owner, J. W. Sanford, builder, C. W. Ma-Rae; 1-story 3-room garage at 1417 San Antonio avenue; cost, $125.
Owner, H. F. Stucham, builder, same; 1-story 4-room dwelling at 1517 Pearl street; cost, $2000.
Owner, Dr. T. P. Tishak, builder, Thomas J. Fine, repairs to 145 Park street; cost, $500.

TWO NEW COTTAGES FOR EAST 27th STREET
Architect C. M. Cook has drawn plans for two one-story frame cottages to be erected on East Twenty-seventh street, between Twenty-second and Twenty-third avenues for George O. Flinn at a cost of $1000 each.
